INTRODUCTION.

[§ 1. HENRY BRADSHAW'S account of the Ordinale, the 'Priests' Guide,' and the Pica in the breviary. § 2. Canon W. Cooke's forthcoming edition of the Directorium or 'Guide,' to which the Tracts in this volume were printed as an appendix. § 3. H. BRADSHAW'S opinion, accidentally confirmed by restoring the breviary Pie to its earlier arrangement. § 4. The Shorter Ordinale is to be found in the Cambridge edition of the Sarum Breviary. Regula de Historiis for places both where there is not a festum loci, and where there is one. The Rule taken from a manuscript breviary at Peterhouse, and from the rare printed Sarum Breviary of 1483. It occurs in another form in the Cambridge edition of the breviary, between August and Advent. § 5. The fragments of Caxton's edition of the simple Ordinale (1477-78). Description by Blades, with Bradshaw's comments. § 6. Wyclif's attacks upon the Sarum Ordinale, cir. 1365-83.

§ 7. The Directorium named, but not originated by Clement Maydeston. Its two forms. Corpus Christi festival. Exeter Ordinale. § 8. Note on some other directoria.

§ 9. Defensorium Directorii occasioned by an erroneous answer from the Sarum experts about 1440-50. It distinguishes the two kinds of Sarum rules, and their obligatoriness. Authorities cited in it. § 10. Its author most probably was Clement Maydeston. § 11. His history. Condition of the Chapter at Salisbury. The importance of the book.

§ 12. The Crede Mihi is less controversial.—A composite work.—The first part consists of a series of Articles on doubtful points in ritual and ceremonial; each of which is stated on both sides, and the Responsio of the Canons is annexed. To some Answers the objections or criticisms by Clement Maydeston are appended. And, possibly, a few supplementary decisions. The latter part of the Tract differs in style and character from the articuli canonicorum. It is a commentary on a complete set of rubrics in their order.—§ 13. Not originated by Clement Maydeston: but by John Raynton, § 14. at the instance of Dr. Thomas Gascoigne.—Printed editions.—Our own text.—§ 15. Revision by William Clerke.—Under what influence?—§ 16. The Breviary Pica supplants the Directorium cir. 1507-1510.—§ 17. Wynkyn de Worde's Admonitio ad emptores.—§ 18. Indication of the place whence (possibly) the earlier Pie originated.]

§ 1. In a "note on Mediæval Service Books" which HENRY BRADSHAW drew up in 1881, and which deserves to be placed in the hands of students in our schools and universities, he has left the following clear statement with reference to the subject with which we are dealing in the present volume, and in another which Canon Cooke is preparing for the Society.

‘Besides these books of actual services, viz., the Breviary, Antiphonarium, Psalterium, Hymnarium, Legenda, and Collectarium, the Processionale, the Missale, Epistolaria, Evangelitaria, Graduale, and Troparium, the Manuale and Pontificale, there was another absolutely necessary for the right understanding and definite use of those already mentioned.’

‘This was the ORDINALE, or book containing the general rules relating to the Ordo divini servitii. It is the Ordinarius or Breviarius of many Continental churches. Its method was to go through the year and show what was to be done; and how, under such circumstances, the details of the conflicting Services were to be dealt with. The basis of such a book would be either the well-known Sarum Consuetudinarium, called after St. Osmund, but really drawn up in the first quarter of the thirteenth century, the Lincoln Consuetudinarium belonging to the middle of the same century, or other such book.

‘By the end of the fifteenth century Clement Maydeston’s Directorium Sacerdotum, or Priests’ Guide, had superseded all such books, and came itself to be called the Sarum Ordinale until (about 1501)<sup>1</sup> the shorter Ordinal, under the name of Pica Sarum, “the rules called the Pie<sup>2</sup>,” having been cut up and

“Pie. (1) a magpie; mixed or unsorted printer’s type.

“Pie. (2) a book which ordered the manner of performing the divine service (French,—Latin).

“Moreover the nombre and hardnes of the rules called the pie’; Introd. to Book of Common Prayer [1549].—Here, as in the case of Pie (1), the word is a French form of the Latin pica, which was the old name for the Ordinal: quod usitato vocabulo dicitur Pica, sive directorium sacerdotum.” Sarum Breviary fo. 1., cited in Procter, On the Book of Common Prayer, p. 8. The name pica, literally ‘magpie,’ was doubtless given to these rules from their confused appearance, being printed in the old black-letter type on white paper, so that they resembled the colours of the magpie. The word pica is still retained as a printer’s term, to denote certain sizes of type; and a hopeless mixture of types is pie.—In the oath ‘by cock and pie,’ Shakespear, Merry Wives, i. 1. 316, ‘cock’ is the name of God, and ‘pie’ is the ordinal or book (relating to divine service).”

re-distributed according to the seasons, came to be incorporated in the text of all the editions of the Sarum Breviary.<sup>1</sup>

§ 2. The Directorium Sacerdotum of Clement Maydeston is being edited by Canon W. Cooke for the HENRY BRADSHAW SOCIETY. In the meantime, as a sort of companion or pioneer volume, we have here re-printed two little tracts which tended to explain or support the principles of the Priests' Guide, and which help to illustrate its history. These are the "Defensorium Directorii," and the "Crede Michi," of which we shall presently have a little more to say when we come to speak of the Pie in the time of Clement Maydeston.

§ 3. When the Sarum Breviary was about to be published by the Cambridge University Press, about 1881-2, it fell to my lot to transcribe the Pie or 'shorter Ordinale,' which occurs at certain intervals in the Proprium de Tempore.

I noticed at the time in certain passages of the Pie what appeared to me to be a singular waywardness, or at least a lack of uniformity, in expression, noticeable between one paragraph and the next, as I read them in their order in the Breviary of 1531. Now, however, having cut up and restored the pieces of the pica or pie to their original order for my own satisfaction in studying the Directorium, I find that the singularity of which I speak has practically vanished; peculiarities (such for instance as the use of cardinal numbers written at length in words, instead of the conventional numerals) which in the Breviary seemed to occur at arbitrary intervals, now run consecutively throughout entire years, instead of appearing (as they do in the Breviaries at least from 1501, onwards) in an odd week here and there, by fits and starts. I think it worth while to record this trifling observation of my own, because it establishes the truth of Bradshaw's dictum that the pie which is found in the Breviary was the result of a cutting up and a redistribution of something which had originally existed in a different form or order. By some instinct, or by some process of induction, Bradshaw had made this discovery for himself so long ago as April 1879, and shears and paste-brush now incidentally confirm it.

In the space here at our disposal I have not been able to include the shorter ordinale restored to its original order as I have reconstructed it from the pieces in printed Breviaries, it having been estimated that it would add too much to the size of the book. It has also been decided that room cannot well be found for a similar but shorter document which is likewise preserved in the printed Sarum Breviary, namely, the 'Regula de Historiis, ubi fiunt [due] commemorationes, videlicet una de Festo loci, et alia de sancta Maria.'

<sup>1</sup> A note by H. B. contributed to "The Chronicles of the Collegiate Church or Free Chapel of All Saints, Derby," by J. Charles Cox and W. H. St. John Hope, re-printed in the appendix to G. W. Prothero's Memoir of Henry Bradshaw, pp. 425-6, and in 4<sup>to</sup> for Mr. Hope.

This I suppose to be an earlier compilation than the complete pica, or short Ordinale.<sup>1</sup>

For this earlier rule I must therefore refer the reader to the recent Cambridge edition of the Breviary of 1531, where it of necessity occurs in that perverse order in which the makers of the breviary arranged it:—perverse, I mean, with regard to the study of the ordinal.

§ 4. There is however a crude form of the same thing which we have no right to omit in this collection. It is a Regula de hystoriis incipiendis or ad inveniendam hystoriam from August to Advent, which I have seen in two interesting Sarum breviaries.

The former of these is in the form of a rubric in the fourteenth century MS. Sarum Breviary, now belonging to Peterhouse, Cambridge, and this I have used for collations in the foot-notes marked 'P.,' and here and there for the additions inserted in square brackets in the text (pp. 140–148) taken from the other authority which I am now about to mention.

This is the earliest known complete copy of the Sarum Breviary, printed at Venice by R. de Noviomagio in 1483. And thus the rule which we print below is (so far as we know) the earliest extant specimen of such directions incorporated in a printed breviary in this country.

Unlike the later printed breviary (of 1531, &c.), the Peterhouse manuscript and the book of 1483 view the question of commemorations in the light approved by Clement Maydeston. They distinguish and provide their Rules for two cases, the one, 'ubi non agitur de festo loci,' the other 'ubi agitur de festo loci semel in ebdomada, sicut de Beata Maria.'<sup>2</sup> The former of these cases was peculiar to the cathedral church of Salisbury and other <sup>1</sup> I suppose the Regula de Historiis to be older than the Pica not merely because it is embodied in the rubric, while the latter is an accretion, but because it knows nothing of a third commemoration (technically known as the 'second,' when it had come into existence) which related to St. Thomas of Canterbury. It would be interesting to enquire whether any of the earlier MSS. of Sarum Breviaries contain this Regula without the weekly commemoratio sancti Thome martyris which appears in the printed breviaries (ed. Cantab. ii. 315–317). The XIVth cent. MS. 'L' used by Dr. C. Seager, in the Bodleian, contains the lessons for the office 'in Commemoratione sancti Thome' prefixed. Annot. in Portif. Sarum, § 107.

<sup>2</sup> This is the description of the two-fold Rule in P. (a MS. Breviary at Peterhouse) and likewise in the printed edition of 1483, ubi non agitur de festo loci, and ubi agitur ['tam'] de festo loci semel in hebdomada, sicut ['quam etiam'] 1483] de sancta Maria.

churches which had our Lady's name for their dedication. All churches and parishes commemorated her once (usually on Saturday) every ordinary week: consequently each Mary-church was provided once for all with a commemoration of its patron saint, and (until the provincial, or national, commemoration of St. Thomas was devised) these admitted of no second weekly commemoration. But churches which had some other dedication (e.g. 'St. Paul's,' 'St. Martin's,' 'St. Margaret's,' and a thousand others) had to find room, if possible, every ordinary week for another commemoration, that of their own eponymous saint or dedication ('de sancto loci' or 'de festo loci') as well as for the universal weekly commemoration of the Blessed Virgin ('sicut de beata Maria.')<sup>1</sup>

§ 5. A more important item in our present small contribution to the Ordinal series, is the text of those sixteen pages, several of them imperfect, of the simple Ordinale Sarum printed in quarto by William Caxton in 1477-78, and advertised in his famous Cedula.<sup>2</sup>

We reproduce these as accurately as we can, not only in respect for Caxton's memory, and in the interest of bibliography, but because we feel convinced that they will be helpful in tracing the history and development of the Pica Sarum.<sup>3</sup>

These fragments were discovered by Mr. Blades, with a mass of other specimens of printer's waste from Caxton's office, in the binding of a copy of Chaucer's Boethius in the Grammar School Library at St. Albans. There can be no doubt that the book was bound in Caxton's workshop.<sup>3</sup>

The fragments, as described in Henry Bradshaw's adversaria,<sup>4</sup>

'are four separate half sheets in quarto' making a total of eight leaves or sixteen pages. They represent four distinct passages or contexts from what Mr. Blades has described as "Directorium seu Pica Sarum, First Version. Quarto. Sine ulla nota," and were printed, as Bradshaw shows, 'about 1478.' Among the 'Typographical Particulars' noted by Blades are the following:—

"Only one Type, No. 3, is used in these fragments. The lines are not spaced out to one length. The longest measure  $3\frac{5}{8}$  inches. A full page has 22 lines. Without signatures,"<sup>1</sup> Bradshaw (in the margin of his own copy) has remarked on the above-mentioned characteristics; "These particulars at once class the book with Infancia Salvatoris (22 lines uneven  $3\frac{3}{4}$  inches) and that again goes with the later set of undated quarto poetical pieces, i.e. about 1478."

§ 6. In attempting to investigate the history of the Ordinale it would not be right to omit all reference to the attack which was made upon it by Wyclif and his followers in the latter half of the fourteenth century, an episode to which Dr. Christopher Wordsworth, sometime Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, drew attention in the later editions of his 'Ecclesiastical Biography' many years ago.<sup>2</sup>

One of Wyclif's English tracts (perhaps one of the earliest, cir. 1365–75) is entitled

"Of feyned contemplatif lif, of song, of the ordynal of Salisbury, and of bodely almes and worldly bysynesse of prestis; hou bi thes foure the fend lettith hem fro prechyng of the gospel."

Wyclif thus traces the rise of psalmody:

"First men ordeyned songe of mornynge<sup>3</sup> whanne thei weren in prison, for techynge of the gospel as Ambrose and men seyn, to putte away ydelnesse and to be not vnoccupied in goode manere for the tyme; and that songe and oure accordith not, for oure stirith to iolite<sup>4</sup> and pride, and here stirith to mornynge<sup>3</sup> and to dwelle longer in wordis of goddis loue.

"Than were matynys and masse and euen song, placebo and dirige and commendacion and matynes of oure lady ordeyned of synful men, to be songen with heiȝ crynge to lette men fro the sentence and understondynge of that that was thus songen, and to maken men wery and vndisposid to studie goddis lawe for aking of hedis : and of schort tyme thanne weren more veyn iapis<sup>1</sup> founden ; deschaunt,<sup>2</sup> countre note<sup>3</sup> and orgon and smale brekyng, that stirith veyn men to daunsynge more than to mornynge, and herefore ben many proude and lecherous lorelis<sup>4</sup> founden and dowid with temperal and worldly lordschips and gret cost. Wyclif sums up his tract by ranking "song and salisbury vse" as two among the four of 'sathanas disceitis' ranged against those saving instruments, the four Euangelists."<sup>2</sup>

Somewhat later Wyclif, or one of his 'poor priests,' in a treatise explaining 'why Poor Priests have none Benefice,' expressed his conviction that if only these were offered, and could conscientiously accept, preferment, "than schulde prestis studie holy writt and be deuout in here preieris, and not be taried with newe offices, as newe songis and moo sacramentis: than Crist vsede and his apostolis, that tauȝten vs alle treuthe and spedly sauynge of cristene peple."

Another tract ('For the Ordre of Presthod') which is found among Wyclif's works in the Parker collection at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and in the Dublin MS., arraigns the same pair of ecclesiastical institutes.

"As austyn and gregory techen wel, preiere is betre herd of God bi compuncion and wepyng and stille devocion, as moyses and Ihu Crist diden, than bi gret crynge and ioly chauntinge that stireth men and women to daunsynge and lettith men fro the sentence of holy writt, as Magnificat, sanctus, and agnus dei, that is so broken bi newe knackynge, it semeth that God seith bi thes newe singeris as he hide in the gospel to pharisees, 'this peple honoureth me with lippis, but here herte is fer fro me, thei worschipen me with-oute cause, techynge lore and comaundementis of men.'" Whereas Wyclif could bless God, 'that in every chirche hath ordeyned masse bookis to witnesse his gospel,' (Of Dominion cap. 3.) he was very vehement against the Pseudo-Freres who have 'special preyeris makid of

"Zit thei chargen more the ordynal of salusbury than the hestis of God; for 3if a prest faile a poynt of his ordynal, that is no poynt of cristine mennus feith, he schal be reproued scharly and openly anon and of manye." (cap. 8.)<sup>1</sup>

(cap. 14.)<sup>2</sup> In the 22nd chapter the author charges the clergy with inciting people to make war against other christian nations, offering 'pardons,' and "hereto thei wolen crie ora pro nobis abouten the grete stretis, that God distroie here cristene bretheren" &c.<sup>3</sup> Also they encourage wealthy sinners on their death beds to endow chantries for numerous priests to "dwelle at o place and crie on hey with newe song, that lettith deuocion and the sentence to be vnderstonen." (cap. 24.)<sup>4</sup>

The treatise "Of Prelates," written perhaps by a follower of Wyclif about 1383, ridicules the blindness of the nobility who maintained wicked 'prelates' to perform a "veyn knackyng of newe song and costly" and give benefices "for her stynkyng and abhomynable blastis and lowde crynge; for bi her gret cryng of song, as deschaunt, cowntre note and orgene, thei ben lettid fro studyng and prechyng of the gospel." (cap. 11.)<sup>5</sup>

And again: "thei don not here sacrifices bi mekenesse of herte and mornyng and compunccion for here synnes and the peplis, but with knackyng of newe song, as orgen or deschant and motetis of holouris<sup>6</sup> and with worldly pride of costly vestymentis and othere ornamentis bouzt with pore mennus goodis, and suffren hem perische for meschef, and laten pore men haue nakid sidis, and dede wallis haue grete plente of wast gold." § 7. The Directorium.

The original Ordinale provided a set of rules which it derived in part from the Consuetudinarium or book of local customs.<sup>1</sup> Its plan was to distribute these rules throughout the proprium de tempore, and likewise throughout the proprium de sanctis, of missal and breviary, for a normal year. This work was carried out more completely in the Directorium or 'Guide,' to which (as has been said) the title 'Ordinale' came in course of time to be transferred.

<sup>1</sup> The Consuetudinarium of Ri. Poore, Bp. of Sarum cir. 1220, of which there are MSS. at Cambridge (Add. 710) and elsewhere, has been printed three or four times already ; but it still requires, and would repay, a good deal of study. As its editors have not furnished the reader with any table of its contents, the following brief summary may be found useful. In the form in which it is best known at present (from the 'Osmund Register') the treatise consists of 104 chapters, which fall naturally into seven divisions.

- (1.) Concerning the Cathedral Staff. The duties and dignities of the principal persons at Salisbury. Of Canons' residence, and penalties (capp. 1-11). I pointed out some years ago that (among others) a passage from cap. 10 has been incorporated in the rubric of the Sarum Breviary, fasc. i. col. xlv., but I had not then realized how much use of the treatise had been made in other service-books.
- (2.) De chori ordinacione et regimine. capp. 12-24.
- (3.) The rules for services in Choir and Chapter House, in Advent (as the norm), with their variations for other times, throughout the year: capp. 25-30, 49-65. A digression is formed (capp. 31-48) by the rules of the tabula or roll of individual duties of singers and readers &c. for the weekly or daily services.
- (4.) An appendix on the Triple Invitatory and the blessing of Holy Water (66-68). The latter is incorporated in the Manuale ad usum Sarum.
- (5.) The Order of Processions for various occasions (capp. 69-91). Not only is this section largely used in the rubrics of the Sarum Processionale, but capp. 79, 80, supply an account of the ceremonies of Easter Eve to the Manuale.
- (6.) The Altar Service. Directions for Mass throughout the year, capp. 92-100. I find that just one third of the long 92nd chapter is cited in various rubrics in the Missal, ed. Dickinson, coll. 7-12, 580-623, while in the Manuale there are two extra cuttings from the same chapter.
- (7.) Various Ceremonies (capp. 101-104). The account of the Holy Oils, 'according to the Sarum custom,' has been borrowed almost entire for the MS. Pontifical of Edmund Lacy, Bp. of Exeter (1420). Edit. Ra. Barnes, pp. 283-5. Cap. 102 supplies some paragraphs to the Breviary rubrics, fasc. i. pp. dclxxiii, dclxxii, while ibid. i. pp. l, li. we find traces of cap. 104, which is largely used in the Manuale. It will be observed that I have said nothing as yet of the influence of the second section of the Sarum Consuetudinarium (capp. 12-24) appearing in other books. In point of fact it was not to be expected that this would leave any traces of its authority in service-books proper. But I have shown in another place (Lincoln Statutes: the Black Book, pp. 127-9) that extracts from capp. 13, 19, and 22, had

What the old Ordinale had done for one ideal year, or 'anni circulum,' the improved 'Guide of Clement Maydeston' applied with greater thoroughness to all the working almanacs of the time. As I have said elsewhere,<sup>1</sup> thirty-five (or thirty-six) varieties were provided so as to serve for every possible contingency.

The Custom-Book provided the regulations :

The Ordinale arranged the rules in a yearly course :

And the Pie or Directory, with lesser or greater fulness and completeness, reduced them into the practically more convenient form of the perpetual kalendar or Book of Almanacs.

The name "Directorium Sacerdotum" was, at least in England, first applied, as it appears, to such a guide by Clement Maydeston, a Brigittine monk at Hounslow in priest's orders, rather before the middle of the fifteenth century.

Taking for his text the evangelical charge, 'Dirigite viam Domini' (Jo. i. 23 ; cf. Is. xl. 3), he claimed to do his part in helping his brethren to approach their Maker with due preparation. But he does not pretend to have originated the work. He tells us that a book of the same description had been in use for some time, and that it was already old enough to have become in a measure out of date. His own work, therefore, has chiefly been that of a reviser ; at the same time it was so far original that he could speak of himself as 'scriptoris totius huius ordinalis,' found their way into the custom Book of a sister cathedral by 1260-70.

The use made of the same treatise by Bp. J. de Grandisson for his Exeter Ordinale in 1337 was, naturally, very considerable.

<sup>1</sup> Breviarium ad usum Sarum (ed. Cantab.) fasc. ii. p. xii. (Introd.). Cf. fasc. iii. p. lxvi. I take the present opportunity of putting on record here what may interest members of this Society, namely, an indication of those portions which HENRY BRADSHAW contributed to the Introduction to fasc. ii. (Psalter &c.) of the Breviary in 1879, in favour of which I suppressed some pages of what I had in print before I shewed the proof-sheets to him. He wrote note 1 on p. v. (the only foot-note which he contributed to that Introduction). From line 8 on p. v. to line 2 on p. vii. is his. From line 4 on p. viii. to line 22 on p. ix. Then he adopts, in the main, my description of the Commune Sanctorum. From line 14 on p. x. to line 3 on p. xii. Then, after a few lines of mine upon the Ordinale or Pica, he resumes from p. xii. line 14 to p. xiii. line 16. The last two or three lines of § 4 are a survival from my original draft, as is also the account of the Accentuarius, and the remainder of pp. xiii-xvi. Thus we may say that he re-wrote all the description of the contents of the Breviary (pp. viii-xiii) retaining little beyond my description of the Pie and Accentuarius, those little portions of the book which I had myself transcribed, and with which I was therefore at that time especially familiar. On Mr. Procter had fallen almost the entire burden of transcription, besides the labour of 3 or 4 of the indexes. In fasc. iii. (the Sanctorale volume), besides the invaluable lists, and such extracts from his letters as are quoted with his name or initials, Bradshaw wrote note+ on p. xlvii., also the brief foot-notes on his lists of hymns on pp. cvii-cxi, cxv-cxviii.

no doubt congratulating himself meanwhile upon the completion of a tedious task in manuscript.

Of the work which Maydeston set himself to correct we gather, in the first place, that it was not identical with the 'true Sarum Ordinale' itself. Of that he speaks in the terms of the highest veneration; and he was not a man averse to plain speaking as a critic. He has adhered to its text religiously, with the one single exception of having corrected the anomalous or incongruous directions<sup>1</sup> written for both vespers of Corpus Christi day.

The feast of Corpus Domini was not instituted until 1264, when Walter de la Wyle was Bishop of Salisbury. If then we suppose that this one passage which Maydeston set himself to correct was part of the original Sarum Ordinal, we must put the date of the 'true Ordinal' considerably later than the time of Bishop Richard Poore and his Consuetudinarium (which was probably composed with a view to the new cathedral church then rising in Salisbury). There is nothing to prevent our believing that the original Sarum Ordinale was similarly compiled five or ten years after the cathedral was completed. (It was built in 1225-1260.) If anything should hereafter be discovered to make us date 'the true Ordinal' earlier than 1265, we must conclude that it had been corrected up to date from time to time. On the other hand it may not unreasonably be questioned whether the Corpus Christi feast was received in this conservative island so soon after its institution in Rome.<sup>2</sup> It appears in the list of festivals in the Constitution of Simon Islip a century later (Provinciale, II. iii. De Feriis, tit. 3 Ex scripturis, Jul. 16, 1362) and indeed in the Constitution of Simon Meopham in 1332. (Wilkins Conc. ii. p. 560.) But there is some reason to think that it had been rather slow in taking root in the West of England. The Synod of Exeter in 1287 does not name it (ibid. ii. 145), but it is recognized in English service books of the latter part of the fourteenth century, such as the Clare and King's College portiforia at Cambridge.

Most interesting in this connexion is the testimony of the Exeter Ordinale, composed, as we know, in 1337. It speaks of Corpus Christi as a novelty, which was gaining ground and likewise causing difficulties.

"Feria quinta infra oct. Trinitatis fiat festum maius duplex de sacramento Corporis et Sanguinis Christi. Ad vespervas Ant. Sacerdos in eternum," &c., &c. "Per totam ebdomadam chorus Exon regitur et ideo extra dominicam et fest. ix lectionum, vel sanctorum Johannis et Pauli, fiat seruicium de solennitate predicta" . . . "¶ Dominica infra oct. Corporis Christi, licet secundum morem aliarum octauarum cum regimine chori videretur de ipsis octauis faciendum : tamen quia id festum est mobile et nouum, et illa antiqua dominica est caput dominicarum estatis, et quasi dies octaua Trinitatis, et ideo solemnior ceteris dominicis, unde multa inconueniencia rubricarum antiquarum destructiua, nisi fiat de ea, contingere possent. Ideo conueniencius est quod fiat semper seruicium de dominica, et memoria cum antiphonis prime diei ad vtrasque vespervas et matutinas, et mediis leccionibus de ipsis octauis, nisi festum sanctorum Johannis et Pauli in ipsa dominica contigerit . . .

"¶ In oct. vero die Corporis Christi si festum simplex ix leccionum contigerit, differatur, et ii. vespere fiant de Oct. sine R. cum memoria de festo in crastino faciend. ¶ Et si festum duplex in Oct. die contigerit, totum fiat de festo, et memoria de oct. tantum illo anno. Tamen si in prima die festum quodcumque duplex contigerit, differatur : quia excedit omnia festa sanctorum.

"¶ Vbi vero fiunt oct. sine regimine chori modus et ordo seruetur per omnia, qui infra oct. Sancte Trinitatis." (Ordinale Exon. 1337, p. liii.)

Maydeston, writing for the guidance of the adherents to the Sarum rites and customs, about a century after Bishop John de Grandisson of Exeter, had (as we have said) to deal not only with the verum Ordinale Sarum (which had its one great blemish in connexion with the rules for Corpus Christi) but also with a book professing to be, like his own, a guide to elucidate that old Ordinal. It was, he says, the composition of a zealous lover of the work of Divine Service (whose name he does not give) and it had been written to give instruction as to commencing the 'histories' (Mattins de tempore), for singing the Responds, for celebrating the weekly commemorations and other matters of the same nature, according to the rules of the Sarum Ordinal.

I am inclined to think that in the Fragments of Caxton's Ordinal of 1477 we have a survival of this tractatus to which Maydeston refers in his preface, and that it held its place until printing had made Maydeston's own work to be more widely known.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> By a happy circumstance, the fragments which remain give us a fairly general notion of the details of the book. The older system of one and two

His ground for writing something with a view to supersede it was again connected with the establishment of Corpus Christi festival.

This (intermediate) Ordinal or treatise which I have ventured to identify with that 'pye' which Caxton subsequently printed in 1477, had been composed in days when Corpus Christi was kept with octaves sine regimine chori. By the middle of the fifteenth century, in the time when Maydeston flourished, the festival had taken thorough root, and if anyone still kept it otherwise than cum regimine chori he was considered very much behind the times, and the (intermediate) book, constructed as it was to suit the older generation, needed to be modified to suit the now established usage.

Clement Maydeston therefore, at the instance of certain persons (whom, as before, he does not name), undertook, with the concurrence of his Superior, to revise and supplement the intermediate ordinal, which the Caxton fragments of 1477 represent; and hence we have his Priest's Guide, the "Directorium Sacerdotum" which he invited his readers to transcribe (if they would) but with the utmost care; and this again Caxton himself printed ten years after he had produced and advertized what I have called the intermediate Ordinale, his "pyes of two and three comemoracions of Salisburi vse."

(§ 8.) NOTES ON SOME OTHER DIRECTORIA.

The Directorium, 'name and thing,' was not altogether peculiar to England; but, as such books are by no means of every-day occurrence, a few words may be added here to describe the Directorium as it appears in other countries.

(a.) There was one printed for the diocese of Constanz in 1501. It consisted of 216 pages quarto, and is described by M. Alès in his bibliographical description of the 'livres de liturgie,' in the collection of His Royal Highness Charles Louis de Bourbon, Comte de Villafranca (Description &c., Paris, 1878) as "un Bref" (i.e., as Bradshaw has told us, the Ordinarius or Breviarius of many continental churches p. x.).

'In nomine Sancte & indiuidue trinitatis patris & filii & spiritus sancti. ac gloriose semper virginis dei genitricis marie. et sanctorum Pelagii martyris. et Conradi<sup>1</sup> confessoris. ac pontificis patronorum huius ecclesie commemorations only, had not quite gone out of use when the Sarum Breviary of 1483 was printed, and relics of it survive as an alternative rule even in 1531.

Constantineñ. Incipit directoriũ continens ordinem quomodo singulis per circulum anni diebus & de quo hore Canonice persoluende sint. secundum modum et consuetudinem chori eiusdem Constantineñ. ecclesie. Et continet. xxxvi. regulas. quia interuallum et festa mobilia tot vicibus variantur.'

Colophon. 'Libellus vtilissimus, dans modum et ordinem orandi secundum ritum ecclesie Constantinensis. Arte & ingenio Erhardi Ratdolt Auguste impressus. Anno M.cccccj. Feliciter finitus.'

I will give, in their chronological order, a short further description of another copy of the same 'index,' and a brief account of two other similar books, all from the collection of Dr. J. Wickham Legg, which the owner has very kindly allowed me to examine.

"[ Index siue directorium Missarum horarum que secundum ritum chori Constancieñ. diocesis dicendarum iussu atque mandato Reuerendissimi in christo patris ac domini / domini Hugonis de landenberg eiusdem diocesis episcopi correctum," &c., &c.

This contains the 7 kalendars, the regulæ (B.C.D.E.F.G.A.) for the season from Advent to New Year, corresponding to the 'Sextum B,' 'Sextum C,' &c. of our English book. Then the 36 rules from Septuagesima onwards. No. 1 when lxx<sup>a</sup> is on 15 Kal. Feb. answers to our 1D., and the last, or 'Tricesima Sexta Regula,' when lxx<sup>a</sup> is on 8 Kal. Mar., corresponds with our 5D.

(b.) The Freisingen Directorium.

"Directorium seu Index diuinorum officiorum secundum ritum ecclesie et diocesis frisingen." Licence by Philip, Bp. of Freisingen, count palatine of the Rhine, and duke of Bavaria.

Contains 7 rules (A to G) from Advent to the New Year, one for each Sunday Letter, also the 36 regulæ, as in the Constanz book, from what the English pica calls 1.D to 5.D inclusive. This little volume has bound up with it the local modus celebrandi and an accentuary, or 'modus accentuandi in missa,' printed at Venice by P. Leichtenstein, impensis J. osuald ciuis Augustensis, 8vo., 20 June, 1516.

(c.) The Roman Directorium, 8vo. Oct. 1539 (begun, apparently, in 1538).

"Directorium Diuinorum Officiorum iuxta Romane curie ritum per Lodovicum, Ciconiolanum regularis obseruantie prouincie Campanie editum. Et per dominum Paulum Tertium, Pontificem Maximum, approbatum, omnibus perutile et necessarium." Rome. Ant. Bladi asulanum.

"Prima Tabula, D.' (for January to December) when Easter Day falls on March 22 (as in our primum D.) 'Secunda Tabula, E.' (Easter on March 23), and so on, ending with '35 Tabula. C.' (when Easter falls on April 25. our quintum C.).

'Tabula unica Ferialis Officii.'

'Rubrice generales partis festiue.'

'Rubrice particulares.' (Jan.—Decemb.)

'Secunda pars festiva' (i.e. Tabula festorum, with a rule as to the seasons when the celebration of matrimony is permitted or forbidden. Use of the Creed. Rule of liturgical colours).

35. 'Tabule residuorum.'"

Tables for the Office of the Departed. Note on extreme unction. 'De officio pro defunctis secundum consuetudinem fratrum minorum.' Rules for pronunciation. The Epact. 'De celebratione Missarum.' The volume contains also a version of the 'Symbolum Athanasii,' by Luigi Ciconiolani, in Latin hexameters.

(d.) A Directorium Benedictinum perpetuum: sive ordo celebrandi diuina officia, diurna, nocturna, missas, alia, secundum ritus Breuiarii Benedictini et Missalis Romani," was issued "jussu D. Bernardi, abbatis S. Galli, O. S. B., Rorschachii 1621. And again at Augsburg (Augustae Vindelicorum) 1650.

(e.) In later times when printing had become common and less expensive, it became usual to produce the Ordinem officii recitandi, as Zaccaria calls it, as an enlarged kalendar, for each successive year.

Thus Mr. C. J. Stewart records, from the Albani library:

"Ordo Divini Officii recitandi sacrique peragendi a capitulo et clero Basilicæ S. Marci pro anno 1795," printed at Rome, 8vo.

We find also in the British Museum (P.P. 2441. q.)

"Directorium officii Divini peragendi iuxta ritum Breuiarii et Missalis Romani ac proprii Hungariæ. . . in usum diocesis Magno-Varadinensis," (cum catalogo cleri) 8vo. Magno Varadani (? Grosswardein) for the years 1806–1808.

And I have before me a copy of "Diario Romano per l'anno bissestile 1832," 12mo. In Roma, nella Stamperia della R. C. A., pp. 48, with a list of all the functions, processions, &c., throughout the year. Also

"Ordo Divini Officii dicendi, et sacrum faciendi a Clero Romano ab iisque omnibus, qui sacras Laudes juxta Kalendarium Romanum persolvunt. . . anno Domini bissextili 1836. 8vo. Romæ Ex Typographia Rev. Cam. Apost. pp. 119 (of which the 'pie' for that year occupies 102 pages, for the direction both of those who used and of those who did not use the Roman kalendar).

(f.) The word directorium occurs also in the title of a book which I have not seen, viz.,

"Directorium ad rite legendum horas canonicas. Mechliniæ, 1842."

Of the "Directorium Sacerdotum" of Clement Maydeston, Canon Cooke and Mr. Lunn will have occasion to speak in a separate volume.

It is, however, necessary to say something in this place about the "Defensorium" of that directory or Priests' Guide, and about the companion treatise entitled "Crede Michi."

§ 9. THE DEFENSORIUM DIRECTORII SACERDOTUM.

In the days of Cardinal Quignon, and of Cranmer, an important practical question was considered: How can the Lessons from Holy Scripture be appointed and read more fully than the order at present in vogue permits or provides? <sup>1</sup>

A century earlier, about the year 1440, a rather more elementary question had been proposed to the experts in Sarum Use. It had taken this form: 'How, and in what manner, and in what order, are the lessons from the Bible appointed to be read,' by existing requirements and rules?

Unfortunately for their own reputation, as it seems, the Sarum experts gave an answer in black and white to this insidious question.<sup>2</sup> They laid down the law that the titles of the lessons (prefixed, or entered in the margins, in the breviaries and lectionaries of the day) are to be strictly and literally observed. Thus they committed themselves to recommending that the bible histories, already considerably curtailed to make room for lives of the Saints and other ecclesiastical readings, should be further subjected to the indignity of being read piecemeal with frequent skipping. Not only were the books, "only begun and never read thorow," but the pieces were frequently, on this interpretation of the order, not resumed at the place where the previous reading was left off, but at some different context, per saltum; and such omissions were made not on any rational principle with regard to the sense of the passage, but simply whenever (and it happened very often) one or more holy days had intervened with proper lessons of their own.

The opinion thus expressed by the Canons of Salisbury was not only inexpedient in itself, but, unfortunately for their credit as experts, it was also at variance with their own Ordinale and with the common rubrics founded thereupon.

Upon this and such like dicta, a writer who had Sarum rules at his fingers' ends found occasion to make a pamphlet exposing the divergencies between the standard Sarum Ordinale and the rubrics contained in the books which were then in ordinary use.<sup>3</sup> And he did not omit to hold up his hands in grief and astonishment at the blindness which, in the days of K. Henry the Sixth, had overtaken the guides of that once eminent and renowned church 'which used to be the bright candle for the whole of England.'

Its author begins by laying down the principle that there are contained in the Sarum Ordinale, two classes of rubrics (1), general rubrics, binding on all the clergy; and (2), ceremonial rubrics; these latter concern only the clerks of Salisbury and any others (such as fellows, and scholars of certain colleges or inmates of certain religious houses) who have at some time, of their own choice, taken a definite oath to observe the customs of the church of Sarum.

The fact to which we have had occasion to refer already, that Salisbury Cathedral has no festum loci, at once placed some of its rules out of harmony with the requirements of the majority of other churches in the country, and so many even in the diocese of Salisbury itself as had a church with a dedication other than St. Mary's.

To this point the author of the Defensorium more than once alludes (capp. 5, 35, 58, 59, 60, where he speaks of the 'festum loci,' and of two or three commemorations).

The general rubrics which direct what is to be said or sung apply (he tells us) to all who receive the Sarum rite in any form.

The ceremonial rubrics are those which are peculiar to the clergy of the Church of Salisbury.

This distinction is insisted on in chapters 2-5, 12, 37, and 41 of the Defensorium.

The author of the tract quotes the practice of the clerks of the colleges of Winchester and Oxford, and those of the royal colleges of Windsor, St. Stephen's, Westminster, and St. Katharine's by the Tower; likewise the venerable cardinals or priest-vicars of St. Paul's, London, and in particular, John Goode (who died in 1450), as well as the venerable fathers, the canons of the same, and the church or chapel of St. Martin le Grand, and Wells Cathedral. All these, in one point or in several, though pledged to observe Sarum rules, yet disregarded the 'ceremonial' rubrics of the Sarum Ordinale. He mentions, incidentally (p. 19), John Kempe, who had been Archdeacon of Durham, Bishop of Rochester (1419-21), Chichester (1420-21), and London, and who at this date (about 1439-50) was Abp. of York, and since 18 Dec., 1439, Cardinal of England,<sup>2</sup> and was subsequently (1452-4) Archbishop of Canterbury, and was also Chancellor of England.

<sup>2</sup> The account of English Cardinals by Francis Thynne inserted in Holinshed's chronicle (p. 1167), says that Abp. Kempe 'was by Eugenius the fourth then Archbishop of Rome, made cardinall of the title of S. Sabina,

§ 10. The author writes in the first person, with confidence in his own opinion, and with a manifest grasp of his subject. The title of his tract naturally suggests that he is none else than the author of the 'Priests' Guide,' which he is here defending against the opinion of other experts. The prologue to the 'Guide' mentions that 'Clement Maydeston' was its author, and we may conclude with Maskell (though we have no absolutely conclusive proof to allege) that 'the probability is' that he wrote also the Defensorium eiusdem Directorii which Caxton and others printed with it.<sup>1</sup>

§ 11. CLEMENT MAYDESTON.

Clement Maydeston, the author of the Directorium Sacerdotum and probably of its Defensorium, was born about the year 1390, at Isleworth opposite Richmond on the Thames.<sup>2</sup>

Isleworth, Twickenham and Hampton, were among the churches with which William of Wykeham endowed his college of St. Mary Winton; and several of the early scholars of Winchester, were drawn from that neighbourhood. Among the first of those who appear upon the school register, was 'Richard Maydeston of Middlesex' in 1393. He had passed to New College Oxford, and in course of time, in 1397, became a fellow. Thomas Maydeston of Isleworth, who entered 'College' in 1399 died in 1401, before he had finished his school course. Two years later Clement was ready for school, and his name was placed at the head of an unusually long roll of scholars (forty-five in number) who were elected under the mastership of Thomas Ramsay and were thrown into mourning for the death of their as saith Holinshed, otherwise by Onuphrius called Balbina: contraire to Polydor who (Hist. xxiii.), affirmeth him to be cardinalited by pope Nicholas I.' Perhaps both statements were correct, or was Kempe ('bis cardine functus') ever a 'cardinal' of St. Paul's?

<sup>2</sup> One Clement Maydeston is mentioned in Peck's Desiderata Curiosa ii. 242. He deposed that he and his father (Thomas Maydeston, esquire) had heard one of the household of K. Henry IV. solemnly aver, when taking refreshment at the House of Holy Trinity, Hounslow, that the body of that King was cast into the water near Gravesend, not really buried at Canterbury. Enquiry in the present century has proved that their informant told them false.

No doubt it was our Clement who wrote the account of Abp. Scrope which is printed by Henry Wharton. Cf. Maskell Mon. Rit. (1882), ii. 346-9. Clementis Maydestone Historia de martyrio Ricardi Scrope archiepiscopi Eboracensis, A.D. 1405. Wharton's Anglia Sacra, pars 2, pp. 369-372. "Deus omnipotens est testis et iudex; quod ego Clemens Maydestone uidi uirum illum et audiui ipsum iurantem patri meo Thome Maydestone omnia predicta fore uera." (p. 372). There is a touch of Crede michi in this deposition.

generous and pious Founder before they had been Wykehamists a full year.

Two among Clement's contemporaries were destined, after passing through their studies at Oxford, to rise to positions of eminence in the church :—Nicholaſ Oslebury as Warden of New College, and Thomas Bekyngton (who was tutor to the King) as Bishop of Bath and Wells.

One of their schoolmates entered upon some secular office ('ad obsequium') on leaving Winchester. But not so Clement Maydeston. It was the rule for William of Wykeham's scholars or 'children,' as each reached his fifteenth birthday, to take the oath of fidelity to the College, and a year later to receive the first tonsure. The number which left the College to enter religious houses hardly averaged one a year. Three lads, however, of those who had entered in 1403, and among them Clement Maydeston the senior on the roll, left school 'ad religionem,' or in other words became monks, following the example of a certain Richard Hoker of Hampton-on-Thames, who had been elected the year before them.<sup>1</sup>

It is not recorded how long Clement remained at Winchester ; perhaps he may have stayed long enough to see John Maydeston (presumably his younger brother) following his example by heading the roll of 1406.

In 1414, the year when Henry Chicheley, a Wykehamist bishop, was advanced from St. David's to Canterbury, Twickenham, in the royal manor of Isleworth, was to become the site of the new Augustinian House of Brigittine nuns, founded by K. Henry V. under the name of 'Syon.' On Sunday, being St. Martin's Day, 11 November, 1431, the convent removed into their newer buildings of Isleworth proper, but their first professions had been taken on the 21st of April, 1420, by Archbishop Chicheley, who solemnly dedicated their chapel and admitted twenty-seven Sisters, five Priests, and two Deacons and three lay Brethren.<sup>2</sup> It was part of the Brigittine constitution, which had been revealed to their foundress in a vision, that the sixty sisters of the house should have associated with them in their convent thirteen brethren in Priest's order (corresponding to the college of the twelve Apostles together with St. Paul the Apostle of the gentiles) and likewise four Deacons, after the similitude of SS.

<sup>2</sup> K. Henry V. had laid the first stone on the feast of St. Peter's Chair, 22 Feb. 1415, in the presence of Ri. Clifford, Bp. of London. The Duke of Bedford laid the stone of the new building at Istillworth on St. Agatha's day, 5 Feb. 1426.

Ambrose, Augustine, Gregory and Jerome, the four chief Doctors of the Church.

It was as a "Deacon" of the Syon Convent that Clement Maydeston found his vocation : and as 'Dñs Clemens Maydeston diaconus' his death is recorded (9 September, 1456) in the Obit-Book of the Brethren of Syon which, after following the Sisters through their strange vicissitudes and their repeated dissolutions and exiles at Zealand, Antwerp and Lisbon, right through the earthquake and the siege in the last-named city, has now a place among the manuscripts in our British Museum.<sup>1</sup>

It is expressly permitted by the Brigittine statutes that the "Deacons" of such a house as Syon may, without prejudice, be advanced to the Priesthood if they will.<sup>2</sup> Of this permission Clement Maydeston availed himself, as he mentions incidentally in his pathetic address to his brother priests at the end of his prologus to his Directorium (reminding us of the pleading of Joseph in the dungeon); and he styles himself expressly 'Beate Brigitte. . . in religione professor indignus.'

Isleworth parish church, though now in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, continued till the time of K. Henry VIII. to belong to Winchester College, and as such it may not improbably have been addicted to the use of Sarum at the time of Clement Maydeston's childhood. It was, however, situated in the diocese of London, and, as Collier tells us, it was by an order of Bishop Clifford in 1414 (the very year when preparations were being made for the first foundation of the Brigittine monastery, and only two or three years after Clement Maydeston left school) that the old Breviary of St. Paul's was laid aside to make way for Sarum use in saying and singing,<sup>3</sup> though we are expressly assured in the Defensorium (cap. 41; cf. cap. 22) that the canons still retained the local ceremonial.

At Winchester Collegè, without doubt, Clement Maydeston must have become familiar with the Sarum rite, as all the school were required by statute to attend surplice-chapel at first and second Vespers, as well as Mattins, Masses, Processions and other canonical Hours every Sunday and festival, secundum usum et consuetudinem ecclesie Cathedralis Sarum. The missa de die was to be celebrated 'secundum ordinale et usum ecclesie Sarum.' The mass of the Blessed Virgin likewise was to be 'secundum usum Sarum ecclesie (as also were the Childermas offices, which the boys were to read and sing themselves). Only they were to be independent in some ceremonial matters such as the peals at evensong, the ruling of the choir, and such things as usually serve to differentiate a Collegiate from a Cathedral service.

One of the exceptions is worth particularizing in this place. It was required by the Statutes of the College of St. Mary Winton, at Winchester, that in place of the Chapter Mass, prescribed by the Sarum rubrics (see Defensorium Directorii, cap. 3), a mass de 'Requiem' should be celebrated in the College Chapel daily.<sup>1</sup> The place of the Missa de 'Requiem' at Sarum immediately after the 'Commendations' to the exclusion of the collect 'Tibi, Domine, commendamus' is specified in this tract as one of the points in which 'Sarum use' was totally distinct from the ceremonial of the cathedral choir at Salisbury (cap. 11).

We ought, perhaps, to take the exclamations, made by Clement Maydeston (assuming that he was the author of the 'Defence' of his own 'Guide'), against the blindness or gross darkness of the once brilliant church of Sarum, with some spice of caution. Nevertheless, the middle of the fifteenth century was by no means the most brilliant epoch for their Chapter. William Aiscough, the Bishop, murdered at Edyngton, in Jack Cade's rebellion, 29 June, 1450, met his fate (it was said) because he did not live in his own city. Many of the stalls were at that time held by ecclesiastics connected with distant churches, such as Lincoln, St. Paul's, or York. The system of papal provisions was in force, so that George Nevill, brother of the famous Richard, Earl of Warwick, and subsequently Bishop of Exeter and Archbishop of York, held a sub-deacon prebend at Salisbury at the age of eleven years, in 1442.

I have spoken of the 'Defensorium' as a 'controversial pamphlet.' If that were its entire character, it would have no place among the publications of our Society. Its claim upon our attention rests on more sterling qualities. The work of a competent ritualist, the author of the Directorium Sacerdotum himself, as we believe, it tells us what the Sarum Ordinale was, and what it was not; it criticizes or explains various rubrics; and it comments incidentally upon a considerable number of passages in the service books of olden time.

A Table of Contents which we give (p. 23) will show sufficiently what the passages and topics are. I am quite unable to trace the train of thought which led the author Clement Maydeston

How far Clement Maydeston's opinion is to be treated as final and conclusive I cannot presume to say. In one point at least it is clear (as Canon W. Cooke has pointed out to me) that he failed to impress it upon those who came after him. He did not cure people of speaking of Low Sunday as the 'Octave of Easter' (Defens. Direct. cap. 57). In spite of the weight of Durandus' dictum on his side, the Sarum missal printed at Paris for F. Regnault in July, 1527, gives 'Dñica in octa. pasche' as the heading of the service 'Dominica in octaua pasche' at the top of fo. lxxxii-b. though 'Dominica .i. post pascha,' on fo. lxxxii. and then 'Ebdomada post octa.'

To speak of the octaves of Easter and Pentecost was an old established custom in this country. Thus we find both 'in octauis pentecosten' and 'in octauis pasce' in the compilation from the Rule of St. Æthelwold, Amalarius, St. Benedict, &c., which the abbot Ælfric made to the monks of Eynsham, cir. 1005 (see Miss Bateson's contribution to the Dean of Winchester Obedientiary Rolls. 1892. pp. 191, 194, 195).<sup>1</sup> The last of these passages contains a statement which is of great interest to us as Englishmen, as giving an early evidence of the introduction of Trinity Sunday:

"in octauis pentecostes legimus et canimus de sancta trinitate."

The Concordia Regularis of St. Aethelwold, which probably belongs to the year 996, has likewise the phrase, "vespera vero octauarum pasce," Dugdale Monast. i. p. xli, and Ælfric quotes it (ubi supra p. 190), adding "De omnibus sanctis una antiphona canatur, usque in octauas pentecosten."

§ 12. THE CREDE MICH.<sup>2</sup>

The 'Defensorium Directorii' is followed in the present volume, as in the appendix to the original edition of Clement <sup>1</sup> Modern authorities, as Miss Bateson has kindly pointed out to me, have come to the conclusion that Ælfric the abbot and grammarian (cir. 955-1205), who wrote the Homilies, the Pastoral, the English version of Donatus, &c. &c., and instructed monks at Cerne (987-990), and Eynsham (cir. 1005), having been himself a monk under Æthelwold at St. Swithun's, Winchester (cir. 971-84), must be distinguished from the Abp. of Canterbury of the same name, and from Ælfric, abbot of St. Albans, as well as from Ælfric Puttoc, Abp. of York.

Maydeston's 'Directorium,' by a second tract of somewhat greater length.

Occupied as the 'Crede Michi' is with the discussion of passages from the rubrics, similar to those which pass under review in the 'Defensorium,' it lacks almost entirely the controversial element. It gains accordingly in point of more careful and scientific arrangement and completeness, while it may lack something of the piquancy of an argumentative defence. Where the controversial element begins to appear it is at once entirely subordinated to the practical purpose of providing a trustworthy guide for liturgical requirements.

I have found it convenient to divide the previous tract into sixty chapters, or at least to put numbers to the original paragraphs: and in like manner I have numbered the sections of the 'Crede Michi' from 1 up to 196.

Though all these sections are based upon one authority, the Sarum Ordinale or body of rubrics, I find in the treatise before us the evidence of a three-fold authorship.

As it has become the custom to treat the whole as the work of one author, Clement Maydeston, I will at once proceed to explain my meaning, and will then add the considerations on which my opinion is based.

Now that the little book is accessible and printed in a modern form, it will be at once evident that it opens with a series of 'articles' or 'opinions' similar in character to that one which as we have seen was spoken of in the 'conclusio finalis' of the 'Defensorium' as having been put in writing on the subject of the scripture lessons in the Breviary.

Only, whereas in the Defensorium we are merely told about the gist and nature of that single opinion or article drawn up by Sarum experts, here in the Crede Michi we have no less than forty-two of such opinions or articles exactly as they were propounded to the Canons of Salisbury as a question proposed (usually introduced by a quotation from the rubric or Ordinale) and all (with a very few exceptions)<sup>1</sup> resolved in the form of the deliberate 'Responsio' or answer pronounced by the Chapter on the question or difficulty proposed to them.

The Canons of Salisbury (about the year 1440-50, it may be, or earlier) I therefore consider to have been in part at least authors of the Crede Michi.

<sup>1</sup> In §§ 1-42 it will be found that seven, viz. Nos. 12, 22, 30, 32, 33, 35, and 36, lack the formal "Responsio." In some of these instances this may be possibly due to a want of editorial precision in the original edition, but in the case of § 22 it is expressly stated that question remained unsolved; and of that in § 30, that it was open to dispute.

But their 'responsiones' do not in every instance in this treatise represent the 'last word' upon the questions proposed.

In several instances a person with a decided opinion of his own has found something further to say upon the matter in hand.

In the very first section he adds his censure upon the Canons' conclusion in these words, 'This answer does not content me,' and again (after letting their second conclusion pass without note or comment) he brings their answer upon the third question to book with a reference to the Ordinale, and bluntly adds, 'therefore I don't believe what they say.'

We are not left long in doubt as to the personality of this writer, who disposes of vain opinions with the confidence and ease of a St. Thomas Aquinas. In Sections 12, 13, and 18 he gives his name: "I Clement Maydeston say that clerks of this class are not bound to do thus; nor parish priests either." "This reply (of the Canons) will never do (Clement)." And when the Canons argued as if the services of St. Mary Magdalene and St. Anne were in pari materia, he remarks that "to compare the two, is frivolous, vain, and futile; quoth Clement."

Thus Clement Maydeston appears in this document as a censor of the decisions of the Sarum experts of his day. I do not find indeed that he is the author of the greater part of these articles. He at most quotes the majority of them with allowance; while to a few he thus appends his own criticisms and amendments.

To his pen I am inclined to assign one or two other sections besides the five criticisms already indicated. I refer to Sections 40, 41. The parties diversely taking the matters in question here are not as in the earlier instances 'multi,' 'quidam,' or 'alii,' nor are they 'multe ecclesie de usu Sarum,' nor the 'collegiati' or 'clerici collegiorum' or even 'alii experti in usu Sarum'; but they are said to belong to a class nowhere else specified in the book, viz. 'Clerici ecclesie Sarum.' If I am not mistaken, Clement Maydeston himself here takes up the character of Respondent (or shall we rather say of Moderator) and adds a couple of conclusions of his own, putting the Sarum folk into the box as opponents, in order to overturn their futile arguments. The summing-up in Section 40, with its biblical phraseology and its light opinion of the Sarum clerks, is thoroughly Clementine, reminding us of the controversial Defensorium more perhaps than any other passage in this longer treatise.

When the reader observes that these very same passages are expunged in Clerke's revised editions (in and after 1497)—where every trace of Clement is carefully suppressed, and where almost everything else is left untouched—he will perhaps allow that the opinion which I have treated as to the authorship of these sections has gained some confirmation. At all events it seems plain, that these two sections can hardly be due to the Canons of Salisbury themselves.

One or two questions are left unsolved, as appears in Sections 22 and 30.

The phrase ordinale quoddam (§ 23) will perhaps receive elucidation hereafter from some competent student.

When the reader has passed beyond the forty-second section he will soon observe, as he proceeds with the treatise, that he is living in a different atmosphere. There is (somewhat to change the metaphor) a distinct alteration in the dialect, as we may call it—the phraseology—of the two portions of the book.

In §§ 1-42 we have had formal "articuli ventilati et approbati" each (with very rare exceptions<sup>1</sup>) concluding with its formal "Responsio," followed in three or more instances by the critical dicta of Clement Maydeston. But from § 43, onwards, the Responsiones Canonice vanish. Another person is speaking for himself, and using naturally the language of the rubrics and the correct copies from which his opinions are derived. He 'speaks like a book,' or 'by the card.'—'Sciendum est,' 'Sciendum quod,' 'regula pro choro,' 'similiter,' 'similiter fiat,' 'regula specialis,' 'vera regula Sarum,' 'nota quod,' 'nota quando,' 'regula generalis,' 'dicendum est'; and 'respondendum est' (once) in § 80; such is now the manner of speech. But 'Responsio,' so common an expression in the first forty or forty-two sections, does not occur at all in the remaining hundred and fifty-four sections. These are (as we shall find they have in fact been called long ago) 'select rubrics,' and notes on doubtful points.<sup>2</sup>

Not only the dialect but the manners and customs are quite different. In Sections 1-42 (as in the Defensorium) the sequence between one topic and the next is by no means obvious. If there is any order in the questions discussed, or in the articles brought forward, it is at least not such as to be obvious to the present writer. But a glance at our Table of Contents to Crede Michi (pp. 83-9) will suffice to show that in §§ 43-126 the writer of that portion of the treatise follows (roughly speaking) the common order of the service-book de Tempore from Advent to <sup>1</sup> The exceptions where no Responsio has been cited in the earlier portion of the Crede Michi are, § 22 'que nondum soluitur,' § 30 'dubitatur.' See also §§ 32, 35, 36; but in these last it seems possible that the word 'Responsio' has been only inadvertently omitted.

Corpus Christi, and the Rubrica Magna, and season after Trinity. Then §§ 127-180 discuss and solve some doubts which had arisen about Saints' Dayservices from St. Andrew's Day onward throughout the year, de Sanctorali. And the remainder of the treatise (§§ 180-195) is devoted to some supplemental questions which may have occurred to the writer too late to be included in the body of his work in their proper order; or else these may have been thought by him to be better suited for a sort of general appendix.

§ 13. The question now arises, Were these later sections (43-195) composed by Clement Maydeston himself, in some period of quiet work, when he was not distracted by the heat of controversy? That he was capable of sustained and orderly constructive work we have proof positive before our eyes in the elaborate "Priest's Guide," which is expressly ascribed to his authorship in the edition printed by Caxton, who was only about twenty years his junior.

However, we must answer this question in the negative, on the very simple, but sufficient ground, that we find another writer avowing the authorship; whereas it has never (so far as I am aware) been claimed for Clement Maydeston until comparatively modern times.<sup>1</sup>

Some years ago the late Mr. F. H. Dickinson kindly drew my attention to a manuscript in the British Museum (Add. 25,456) which he found to have some connexion with the Crede Michi, although the time at his disposal had not allowed of his ascertaining the precise relation of the one to the other. For many years I found no convenient opportunity for acquainting myself with the manuscript itself. My delight may be imagined, when I found that beside a 'pie of two commemorations' just to regulate the beginning of the history 'Deus omnium' after Trinity, in churches where the Octaves of Corpus Christi are observed with Rulers of the Choir (for which Mr. Dickinson's note had prepared me),<sup>2</sup> it proved to contain, with some omissions, a copy of the self-same sections of the printed Crede Michi (Nos. 43-195, or at least to § 192), not indeed absolutely identical with it, line by line, but yet sufficiently close to be considered the original edition. It has, moreover, the same title at the end, coupled with its writer's name, as follows :

<sup>1</sup> So far as I know, the first writer to assert that Maydeston was the author of Crede Michi was Dr. Thomas Wagstaffe who, having been Chancellor of Lichfield, and rector of St. Mary Pattens, was consecrated a Bishop among the Nonjurors in 1693. For a knowledge of his notes I am indebted to the Rev. Canon William Cooke, who proposes to edit them in his volume containing the 'Directorium.'

"Explicit Tractatus vocatus Crede Michi quod Raynton."

He introduces the Pie with the simple heading,

'Ista regula est breviter compilata de Inceptione historie Deus omnium, vbi octaue Corporis Christi fiunt cum regimine chori, et due fiunt commemorationes."

Having gone through thirty-four, but what, as I find, were intended to be thirty-five, rubricated rules from 1A. to 5G.,<sup>1</sup> he ends that document on leaf 93<sup>b</sup> with simple colophon

"Expliciunt quod Raynton I[ohannes]."

He proceeds then at once to the other piece, which here concerns us especially, and starts with the following dedicatory address :—

"¶ Venerabili doctori et Reverendissimopatri Magistro Thome G sequentes rubrice verissime de Ordinali Sarum excerpte tradantur propter declarationem sue consciencie, et ad destructionem falsarum rubricarum que in libris ponuntur valde diffuse.

Quodcunque festum in dominica ii. iii. vel iiij. Aduentus Domini contigerit, differatur in crastinum, nisi fuerit festum dedicacionis," &c., &c.

The question naturally arises, Who is 'the very reverend father, Mr. Thomas G.'? The conclusion of the book lets us into the secret :

"Iste liber compilatus fuit utiliter ad instanciam Reuerendi Doctoris Magistri Thome Gasgan', tractus de Ordinali Sarum."

§ 14. THOMAS GASCOIGNE of Oriel College Oxford, D.D., was Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford in the years 1434 and 1439. He was Chancellor of York Cathedral 1432–42, Chancellor of the University of Oxford 1442–45. And he died 13 March, 1457–8. It will be remembered that Maydeston (assuming him to be the author of the Defensorium) has cited him (cap. 58) as a living authority on ceremonial, and has styled him 'doctor devotissimus' of the province of York.<sup>2</sup>

It appears, therefore, that this leading Oxonian (canon of York as he was) was conscious of the importance of Sarum use within his own jurisdiction, and charged one John Raynton to compose a treatise out of the Sarum Ordinale to refute and to correct the false rubrics which had crept into the books in circulation, and which he, no less than Clement Maydeston himself, desired to reform.

The result of this charge is to be seen in the British Museum manuscript called Crede Mihi, which Mr. Warner dates about the third quarter of the fifteenth century. It may be the original, written cir. 1450-55.

Of the author, JOHN RAYNTON, I have hitherto been able to learn nothing but his name.<sup>1</sup>

Like others before and since, he felt that he could finish with a verse :

“Explicit Tractatus vocatus Crede michi quod Raynton
Si Iho ponatur et han simul accipiatur.

Et nes Jungatur, qui scripsit sic nominatur.

Iste liber compilatus fuit utiliter,” &c. (as quoted above).

I conclude then that the Crede Mihi, as we find it printed in 1487 and later years in the fifteenth and sixteenth century, and reprinted in this present volume, is in reality a composite document, consisting of about 101 sections of John Raynton's compilation cir. 1450 subsequently increased to 154 (not improbably by Maydeston cir. 1455) and preceded by about 42 sections or articles agreed upon by a conference of Canons of Salisbury, and in some points revised and criticized by Clement Maydeston.

Gascoigne died early in 1458 and Maydeston about two years before him, so that neither of them lived to see the first printed edition of the work in which they had taken a smaller or greater part. Cardinal Kempe and John Goode (both of them mentioned in the Crede Michi) had also passed away.

The work very soon made its way, and had penetrated to Scotland by 1492.<sup>2</sup>

Two English editions at least appeared in Caxton's lifetime (besides another at Antwerp); and another after Caxton's death came from the press at Westminster, the edition by Wynkyn de Worde (1495) which forms the basis of our text.

“A silver chalice gilt, in the custody of Sir John Strachin, with a small book called Crede michi, a corporal and two phials, to the Altar of St. Thomas the Apostle of Aberdeen.” Cartularium Eccl. S. Nicolai Aberdonensis (New Spalding Club, ed. J. Cooper, D.D., 1892) vol. II. p. 245.

After that date there appears to have been some call for a revision ; and the work was done by a Cambridge man, William Clerke.

§ 15. WILLIAM CLERKE, who undertook to revise the Ordinal<sup>1</sup> (and presumably the tracts appended to it, for we find that they were somewhat curtailed or expurgated in 1497) had been elected from Eton to King's College, Cambridge, in 1467. He gave up his fellowship and became chanter of the college chapel, after which he was a domestic to Abp. Rotherham, who had likewise been fellow of King's. It would seem that Clerke was a layman, or at least not in the higher orders, and was married, and that he and his wife died 4 Aug. 1509 ; and they are commemorated by the following inscription which is in the nave of York Cathedral :

Sub hoc lapide iacent Willielmus Clerke et
Augusti, Añ. Dñi. 1509. Quorum anime in pace requiescant.<sup>2</sup>

It was at the appointment of the University of Cambridge that Clerke amended and corrected the pie. His patron Abp. Rotherham had been Chancellor of Cambridge in 1469, 1473, 1475, 1478, and 1483, having been master of Pembroke Hall at the last of these dates as well as Archbishop, while on the third and fourth occasions (1475-78) he had held the see of Lincoln as well as the Great Seal of the realm. It is quite possible that he continued to exercise some influence at the University after he ceased to be Chancellor.

But I think it a significant fact that the Chancellor of Cambridge in the years 1494-6, when we must suppose that the order or resolution to revise the ordinal was taken, was in fact a nephew of Abp. Rotherham and was none other than John Blythe, LL.D., Master or Warden of King's Hall 148-898. He had been an Archdeacon in the dioceses of York and Lincoln, and in 1492 was Master of the Rolls, but since 1493-4 had been Bishop of Salisbury.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> John Blyth had been Preb. of Leighton Ecclesia Lincoln, 1482-85. Arch. of Stow, 1477 ; Archd. of Huntingdon, 1478-93. Also Archdeacon

It is I think not unreasonable to suppose that the Bishop of Salisbury was not well pleased with some of the reflexions published in the early editions of the Defensorium; and that he took occasion, at the call for a fresh edition, not only to instruct William Clerke to amend what errors had been discovered, but to put his pen through the caustic remarks, which were being circulated under Maydeston's name, to the discredit of the Illustrious Church of Sarum.

The edition from which we print our text is that of 1495 by Wynkyn de Worde 'in domo Caxton,'<sup>1</sup> the latest printed before Clerke's revision. We have shewn the alterations and modifications or omissions which that revision entailed by notes introduced within square brackets in a manner which we hope will be sufficiently perspicuous without distracting the reader.

The system which we have pursued in editing the text will be found sufficiently explained in a note near the bottom of p. 3 below. We have retained the old punctuation including the use of marks of parenthesis, sometimes the single "hook," sometimes in pairs, which the old printer used where we might now put a comma or an inverted comma.

The text, in beautiful black type without rubrications, runs on consecutively, broken, as a rule, only by the ordinary black-letter paragraph-marks. There are however four places where a scanty space is left blank, and these, I have no doubt, have some reference to an original (manuscript) copy with musical notation.<sup>2</sup> The passages are as follows:

§ 16. It may have been by a mere coincidence and nothing more that about 1509, the year in which Clerke and his wife died, the sale of the Directorium came virtually to an end.

Four, or more, editions of Maydeston's Directorium, and seven, or more, of Clerke's own revision thereof, may have been found quite sufficient to supply any reasonable demand for copies of a technical book of rules, which had a strictly limited use, especially when in past generations a few Ordinalia in manuscript had tolerably well supplied the need. At all events the call for fresh editions does not appear to have continued after the death of the reviser of the book, and we find an Archbishop of Canterbury (Cranmer) some forty years later making use of a copy which Pynson had printed in 1501.

Shortly before Clerke's death there had been moreover a new departure taken in the development of the Ordinale: and this must further have checked the sale of the 'Priest's Guide.'

§ 17. On the 21st of June 1507 Wynkyn de Worde, who had been one of the chief printers of the Directorium, issued in two little pamphlets adapted to the two liturgical half years, a shorter edition of the pie.

He had an octavo Breviary printed for him in Paris, and he issued the two volumes under one and the same date "Londoniis, 1507, xj. Kalendas Julij."

No copy of either part of this pamphlet Pica Sarum itself has been preserved; but the trade announcement, and directions for binding it, are extant; and they are sufficiently interesting to be quoted here. They represent an advance in the mystery of printing since Caxton's placard advertisement of the old Ordinale was struck off and posted up in 1477-8.

in his exemplar for some musical notation of the cantus; and in point of fact, Raynton's MS. of Crede Michi actually supplies the musical stave in the 3rd instance.

Although the only surviving copy of the edition of the portos containing the foregoing admonitio, is one of those bound in one volume separate from the Pie which is now lost, we may conclude that W. de Worde found that his customers practically decided in favour of binding the two halves of the Pie, each with its own (winter or summer) services. For we find that in less than three years (22 Dec. 1509) Wynkyn had adopted a modification of that plan. He employed Hopyl at Paris to print for his English customers a breviary in two volumes, but with the short pica cut up and placed at the head of each season of the Temporale in the form familiar to us at least in every edition of the Sarum Breviary from 1509 onwards.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Portiforium cum pica : It will be seen in Appendix II. below that the earliest Sarum Breviary of which we have a complete example (1483) had made the experiment of printing certain regulae de historiis (such as some of the MSS. had contained), and this was a step in the direction of a breviary with the pie.

Recent enquiry has led me to the conclusion that this improvement was not by any means a new invention originated in 1509.

Apart from the fact that the earliest known edition which survives in a complete state (that of 1483) contained some sort of pie,<sup>2</sup> following in this some of the still earlier MSS., it appears that J. Philippe printed at Paris for J. Huvyn of Rouen a portos with a pie identical with those of 1509 onward, so far as it went, as early as 16 Aug. 1501.<sup>3</sup> This pie is not a separate pamphlet but an integral part of the book, like that incorporated in later editions. As in the case of so many other sets of the Sarum portiforia, the pars estivalis now alone remains. It opens with a leaf of benedictions for the lessons at mattins, and then the leaf signed 'a.ii.' commences thus :—

¶ In Dei nomine amen. Breuiarii una cum ordinali secundum usum Sarum pars estivalis incipit.

I A. ¶ In die trinitatis totum seruitium de festo. Ad .ii. ves. de trinitate solennis memoria de comemo. feria .ii. .iii. et .iiii. de comemo. et memo. de oct. cum an. de noc. fe. v. de corpore xpi."

This continues for 9½ pages to the end of 5 G. for Trinity week and Corpus Christi, just like the later book, as in the Cambridge edition of the Breviary of 1531, fasc. i. pp. mxxix–mxliii. It ends in the middle of the 9th page of pie (= sig. a. vj<sup>a</sup>).

" . . . missa de vigilia cantetur ad summum altare post .vi. et me. de sancta etheldreda" and continues in the next line of the same page with the opening of the Temporale,

ad vēs. super psalmos an.
Gloria tibi trinitas equalis,*” &c.

It contains also the pie for nine Sundays after Trinity, extending to nearly 27 pages, and shorter sections for the “histories” Si bona,<sup>1</sup> Peto Domine, Adonay, Adaperiat, and Vidi Dominum.

It is clear that the Pie in the Breviary cannot pretend to be a complete directory. It is a useful guide in the chief cases of doubt, but does not afford an exhaustive list of all festal or other services falling within each week.

While they who used the Directorium Sacerdotum, or the earlier Ordinale, would need to turn to the kalendar but seldom, and in some weeks might go through without referring to it at all, they on the other hand who had only the shorter Pie of three Commemorations, which the Breviary provides, would be in danger of missing half their Saints’ day services, unless they took the precaution of consulting also the kalendar for every week.

§ 18. As regards the question, What were the authority and the auspices under which the Breviary Pica was produced?—it seems evident from the terms of W. de Worde’s advertisement that it was a private venture; and I can find only the very slightest indication of the influence under which it was brought out. When printing had been introduced, the living authority of Salisbury had already somewhat declined. Perhaps the powers there were too well satisfied with the traditional forms (whose excellence had been so widely recognised) to venture, or to care, to take any steps in order to guide contemporary efforts for improvement. It is a remarkable fact that the printed Missals (and the Legenda of 1516) take no notice whatever of a weekly commemoration of St. Osmund, although lessons and a mass are provided in some copies of the Breviary at least as early as 1519. That more respect is shown for the local requirements of Lichfield than for those of London<sup>2</sup> in the printed Sarum books, may be due perhaps to the fact that St. Paul’s had only in later generations submitted to Sarum customs, and then had done so with reservations (it may be) rather than with perfect satisfaction. Though

<sup>2</sup> Brev. Sar. ii. 317, 319, iii. 193; St. Erkenwald’s days are 30 April and 14 Nov. M. Sam. Berger informs me that the kalendar of the Sarum Breviary of 1483 (the earliest printed breviary now complete) omits all mention of St. Osmund both at 16 July and at 4 December. Also St. Erkenwald, at 14 Nov. is unnoticed.

Lincoln retained its own use until 1556, the Sarum books had made no provision either for the weekly commemoration of St. Hugh which was used in certain important Colleges, or for the feast of his Translation on St. Faith's day, 6th October. The shorter pie does however refer to this last in several places, and once it goes so far as to mention 'dyocesis Lincoln' by name.<sup>1</sup> This, so far as I have observed, is a greater concession to Lincoln requirements than the Directorium of Clement Maydeston &c. allowed; but we have no proof that even after 1509 this special Lincoln service was provided in print, although it had been thus allowed or prescribed.

There was however one place which, as we have already noticed, had (since the invention of printing) taken up the work of liturgical improvement which Sarum and Oxford had begun. It is evident that the persons who were engaged in writing and printing Sarum books, while they made light of the Translation of St. Frediswide of Oxon (11 Feb.) and of St. Hugh of Lincoln (6 Oct.), fully realised that they were catering for the men of Ely. St. Etheldreda has her two feasts regularly in Sarum use,<sup>2</sup> but it cannot have been with a view to home requirements at Salisbury that an order for a weekly commemoration of St. Audrey is provided in the portiforia from 1494 (if not earlier) to 1557, or almost from first to last. The influence of John de Burgh (author of Pupilla Oculi,<sup>3</sup> chancellor of Cambridge, 1384) Woodlark, Rotheram, J. Blythe and W. Clerke did not wane when Fox and Fisher ruled at Cambridge. And it is a significant fact that where the Directorium of 1495, speaking of July 18th (St. Arnulph's day), had merely spoken of places 'where there are three commemorations,' the shorter Pie of 1509 and later years has under the Sunday Letter C the notes

"tamen in diocesi Eliensi, et ubi celebretur festum sancti Osmundi, tota cantetur hystoria." and

"Et nota quod in diocesi Eliensi tota cantetur hystoria in die sancti Arnulphi."<sup>4</sup>

A list of various editions of the Sarum ORDINALE and DIRECTORIUM is given immediately below. Any further remarks which it may be necessary to make upon it will be brought forward in Canon Cooke's edition of the work itself.

For the present, therefore, it only concerns us to say with regard to the little volume before us that the tracts 'Defensorium' and 'Crede Michi' were attached to all seven editions of Clerke's revision (1497-1508) as well as to the four editions of Maydeston's unrevised Directorium (1487-95). It is perhaps hardly necessary to tell the reader that we do not suppose that the tracts here printed were included in Caxton's quarto Ordinale of 1477 of which fragments only now remain. We think it highly probable that Caxton himself was not aware of the existence of Maydeston's work until after he had printed that which its author had intended it to supersede. Subsequently, when after ten years a fresh edition was required, Caxton printed Maydeston's Defensorium, with the tracts, in preference to reprinting the older work which he had printed before.

Mr. Lunn, who some years ago compared the third Pynson (1501) with the first edition produced by the same printer in 1497, observed that the former ("P3.") is an exact reprint of the other ("P."), page for page, and (with a few exceptions) line for line.

It remains for me to name those who have afforded assistance in the present book.

Mr. Alfred Rogers has collated the Defensorium Directorii of 1499 at Cambridge (Henry Bradshaw's own copy of Wynkyn de Worde's second edition, "W 2," which is one containing Clerke's revised text) with Gerard Leeu's Antwerp quarto of the unrevised Maydeston 1488 ("L."). Miss Parker has supplied the various readings from the last working edition of 1508 ("P 5.") from the Bodleian Library, Oxford. And Canon William Cooke has kindly furnished me with his collation of my own text (W. de Worde's unrevised, 1495, or "W.") with three or four copies in the British Museum: Caxton 1487 ("C.") Leeu 1488, ("L.") and (for the Defensorium) Pynson's 1497 and 1501 ("P." and "P 3"). For some knowledge of this last named edition I have also had the advantage of consulting a transcript made by the Rev. J. R. Lunn, B.D., whose notes upon the Pie, communicated to me twelve years ago, have been helpful in the present undertaking. His perfect knowledge of the kalendars has likewise saved me from some errors. I have expressed my acknowledgments to the Rev. Stephen Phillips, D.D., and to Dr. J. Wickham Legg, in another place. I have also been under some obligation to Mr. Francis Jenkinson, the Cambridge University Librarian, and to Mr. Falconer Madan of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and to Mr. E. Gordon Duff and Mr. E. G. Fawke at Manchester.

I have above all to thank Canon W. Cooke for carefully reading over the proof sheets with the texts of 1495, even when ill-health must have made the task difficult. To him also are due some of the references given in the notes. The Rev. Francis Procter has also kindly read over some of the sheets, thus happily reviving the companionship of former years. The Rev. E. S. Dewick has been ever ready when I have asked him both to give his sound advice and to render every assistance in his power.

DIRECTORII SACERDOTUM.

Ao Dñi 1495.

The printed editions collated (or examined) for the present reprint are as follows (those which have been only partially examined being noted in brackets):—

Clement Maydeston's Directorium Sacerdotum.

P1.=Pynson's first quarto (1497).

(P2.=Pynson's second quarto, 1498.)

W2.=Wynkyn de Worde's second quarto (1499).

P3.=Pynson's third quarto, 1501.

(P4.=Pynson's fourth quarto, 1503.)

[W3.=Wynkyn de Worde's third quarto, 1504, not examined.]

P5.=Pynson's fifth quarto, 1508.

'Caxton' is specified in full when the edition of 1487 is not followed by Leeu; but when we give the abbreviation C. it may be inferred that Leeu agrees with his reading. In other words "C" (per se) = 1487 + L.; but 'Caxton' = 1487 alone.

P3. may be taken to include P2., of which it is, as Mr. E. Gordon Duff kindly informs us, a page for page reprint. Likewise P2. is a reproduction of P1.

As regards the pagination, there is none in the W. de Worde of 1495. I therefore can only note the signature from the foot of the leaf (p ij., p iij., &c.), where one occurs. I have employed the arabic numerals 5—8 for the corresponding leaves which do not bear a signature on the face of them in the quires of W. de Worde's quarto.

I have departed from the original of 1495 in three or four particulars:—

- (1) I have used capital letters for Divine Titles and for all proper names, in which W. de Worde had no fixed rule. Possibly large initials were scarce in his fount of type. In many MSS. of that date large initials were consistently used for proper names. (2) I have used italic type for rubrics quoted, and the like. Though W. de Worde used no rubrication (nor, of course, italics), but kept to the sombre colores piceae, I have not thought it incumbent on me to deny the reader the help which such distinctions of typography minister to the mind through the eye. Now and then the 15th century printer made use of hooks (marks of parenthesis) partly as a device to mark quotations. These I have retained (along with other punctuation) as a curiosity, exactly as he used them. Sometimes he omitted the convex hook, sometimes the concave. Sometimes he prints 'octa.', sometimes 'octa' without a point. He was feeling his way. (3) I have expanded the very few contractions which are found in the original, noting them by italics only in cases where any shade of doubt (or variety of reading) is conceivable. (4) The only contractions which I have myself employed are 'b.' (very rarely) for 'beatus' and its cases, and 'sctus' 'sca' and other cases of 'sanctus,' occasionally.

¶ Et responderunt in scriptis quod omnes lectiones habent legi secundum titulationem feriarum et dominicarum per totum annum.

Videlicet quod in secunda dominica legantur lectiones de eadem dominica. et in quarta dominica legantur lectiones de .iiij. dominica.

Et sic saltando omittende sunt omnes intermedie lectiones. siue de dominica .iiij. siue de ferijs eiusdem tercie dominice.

Ecce quam manifeste ordinale dicit quod lectiones debent legi secundum ordinem.<sup>10</sup> et non secundum titulationem feriarum.

¶ Quod autem lectiones de temporali per totum annum debent legi per ordinem. Patet palam per verba Ordinalis

Cetere vero dominice medie eiusdem historie nullum habent titulum. excepta sola historia (Domine ne in ira).<sup>5</sup>

Ergo necesse videtur et congruum vt omnes lectiones cuius libet historie legantur per ordinem. et non per saltum.

Nam audeo affirmare quod in legenda Sarum (in diuersis historijs) ponuntur ducente lectiones que nunquam fuerunt lecte. nec in futurum erunt legende in ecclesia Sarum.

[60.] ¶ Conclusio finalis.

Omnibus premissis sagaciter et diligenter pensatis. consultius et melius fere dinoscitur sequi verba ipsius ordinalis. legendo per totum annum omnes lectiones de biblia extractas. secundum ordinem lectionum Non secundum titulos et Rubricas dominicarum et feriarum neque per saltum.

Quis vero fuerit qui distinctiones lectionum et titulos earum. Vel qua auctoritate fecerit. vsque hodie ignoratur.

CREDE MICH.

A° Dñi 1495.

The printed copies collated for the present edition of the Crede Michi (pp. 27-81) are as follows :—

Clement Maydestone's Text of "Crede Michi."

Caxton. = W. Caxton's folio (1487). British Museum, Case 10. b. 16.

L. = Ger. Leeu's quarto, 1488. British Museum, Case 35. f. Where Caxton and L. agree, they are cited jointly in the notes as 'C.'

W. = Wynkyn de Worde's first quarto, 1495, which supplies our text, and is usually cited in the notes, where necessary, as 'ed. 1495.' British Museum, Case 35. f. 4, and Rev. Chr. Wordsworth.

J. Clerke's Revision.

P3. = R. Pynson's third quarto, 1501. British Museum, Case 35. f. 7. (Abp. Cranmer's copy.)

P5. = R. Pynson's fifth quarto, 1508, the latest edition before our own. The Bodleian Library, Oxford, Gough Missals, 111. (also 4<sup>o</sup>. S. 33. Th. Seld.)

(P1., Pynson's first quarto, 1497, Brit. Mus. Case 35. f. 6. and P4 his fourth quarto, 1503, Bodl., Gough Missals 142, have been examined for a few passages.)

For a list of all the editions, founded upon HENRY BRADSHAW'S researches, see above p. 3.

For the collations made in London we are indebted almost entirely to Canon W. Cooke. Those at the Bodleian have been done by Miss A. F. Parker, and the Defensorium Directorii was collated with W. de Worde's second quarto (1499), represented by the unique copy in the Henry Bradshaw Collection at Cambridge, by Mr. Alfred Rogers.

'R.' indicates John Raynton's manuscript, written for Dr. T. Gascoigne, cir. 1450, now in the British Museum, MS. Add. 25,456, and collated for pp. 40-80, the portion which it has in common with our tracts. [The editor has introduced some additions and collations from Raynton's Crede Michi in square brackets and inverted commas, marked with Raynton's initial. He has also inserted a few other memoranda in square brackets to save the reader the trouble of constant searching in a kalendar or index of names.]

¶ CREDE MICHI.

[I.] Et primo<sup>2</sup> de octa. Corporis Christi. &c.

SCIENDVM est quod multe ecclesie de vsu Sarum (vbi oct.
Corporis Christi fiunt cum regimine chori) dicunt quotidie infra predictas octauas. Gloria tibi Domine qui natus. de quocumque fiat seruicium ad vespas matutinas et ad omnes alias horas (si metrum sustineat)

Et ad primam ¶. Qui de virgine.

Et allegant pro se hymnum. Saluator) et alium (Lucem tuam) qui cantentur<sup>3</sup> quotidie ad honorem ipsarum octauarum.

¶ Alii dicunt<sup>4</sup> quod predictus ¶. Gloria tibi Domine) non debet dici nisi quando de octa. fit seruicium tantum.

Et isti allegant pro se Rubricam in die Natiuitatis Domini. que loquitur solum de octa. sine regimine chori.

¶ Responsio. (Gloria tibi Dñe) et ¶. Qui de virgine) non debent dici<sup>5</sup> in festis .ix. lec. infra octa. Quia si dicerentur.
oporteret quod Responsoria super hymnos dicerentur cum
Alleluia. quod non potest fieri. quia esset contra ordinale.

Ista responsio non placet mihi. quia contrarium patet in Conuersione sancti Pauli [25 Jan. D.].

[2.] ¶ De festo .ix. lec. infra oct. Corporis Christi contingente. Item vbi octaue Corporis Christi fiunt cum regimine chori. Si festum .ix. lec. infra octa. predictas contigerit.<sup>6</sup>
Quidam dicunt quod tale festum habebit vespas vtrasque.<sup>7</sup>

tantum. et secunde vespere erunt de octa. sicut in festis .ix. lec. vbi sequitur aliud festum.

¶ Responsio. Verum est quod tale festum habebit vtrasque vespervas (nisi in sabbato contigerit. Et illa regula est diu vsitata in ecclesia Sarum et approbata.

[3.] / ¶ De psalmis dicendis in octa. Corporis [fo. A].b. Christi.

Item vbi fiunt octaue cum regimine chori. scribitur expresse in ordinali Sarum. quod in octa. die ad vtrasque vespervas dicuntur psalmi feriales.

Sed viri experti in ordinali dicunt. illa regula sit falsa. nec omnino debet admitti. quia omnes psalmi debent dici in oct. sicut in prima die.

¶ Similiter dicendum est de hymno. et V. in secundis vespervis octa.

¶ Responsio. secundum Ordinale Sarum.

Sec alii dicunt quod de huiusmodi festis trium lec. fiat tantum memoria (nisi festa<sup>5</sup> trium lectionum adiuncta fuerint.

In vigilia sancti Mathie Apostoli oritur magna questio. an videlicet debent celebrari cum nocturno et cum missa de Vigilia (sicut multe ecclesie faciunt).

An sine aliqua mentione de vigilia. preter ieiunium (prout alii tenent) eo quod Rubrice Sarum nullam de vigilia faciunt mentionem.<sup>7</sup> ¶ Responsio. Ecclesia Sarum nihil facit de illa vigilia nisi ieiunium tantum.

[6.] ¶ De vigilia Natiuitatis beate Marie. [7 Sept. E.]

In multis missalibus ponitur specialis missa pro vigilia Natiuitatis beate Marie. Et in antiphonarijs scribitur quod R. feriale dicetur in vigilia Natiuitatis beate Marie.

Tamen ordinale Sarum et multe ecclesie nihil dicunt de illa vigilia. sed habent ibi plenum seruicium de s̄ca Maria. [Cf. Defens. Direct. cap. 15.]

[8.] ¶ De versicul. infra octa. Corporis Christi.

Item ad memoriam de octa. Corporis Christi. in festis sanctorum nouem lectionum. quidam ad vespervas dicunt ℣. Panem de celo. Qui quidem ℣. habetur quotidie ad vespervas octa.

Sed alij dicunt quod ℣. Posuit fines erit ℣. tam ad vespervas quam ad matutinas.

[9.] ¶ De psalmis et Responsorijs infra octa. Ascensionis.

Sed<sup>8</sup> alij affirmant quod Responsoria et antiphone de sexta feria debent iterum repeti. et post antiphone et Responsoria de sabbato. et antiphone et Responsoria non dicuntur<sup>9</sup> secundum ordinem vt videtur.

Et valde inconueniens videtur quod tali anno diceretur ter de sexta feria. et semel de sabbato. vbi verus ordo potest obseruari.

[10.] ¶ De commemoratione Festi loci ante .lxx.

Item quando dominica .lxx. cadit in die scē Prisce virginis. [18 Jan. Lit. Dom. 1D.] Multi experti in ordinali Sarum dicunt quod tunc in hebdomada precedenti dicetur seruicium de festo loci. Ita quod missa tercię dominice dicatur in capitulo.

¶ Responsio. Prima opinio est vera. scilicet quod fiat commemoratio festi loci.

[11.] ¶ De Sequentijs beate Marie dicendis.<sup>12</sup> a (Domine ne in ira) vsque ad aduentum Domini.

Dicunt quidam collegiati<sup>13</sup> quod ille sex Sequentie solummodo cantande sunt que intitulatur infra octa. Assumptionis beate Marie.

Sed alij affirmant quod non. sed est in beneplacito Cantoris in huiusmodi commemorationibus accipere qualemcunque Sequentiam sibi placentem de beata Virgine.

[12.] ¶ De collectis ad (Placebo).

Sed clerici Collegiorum (vbi reges et principes sunt fundatores) dicunt in huiusmodi quotidianis exequijs primam Collectam habendam pro huiusmodi fundatoribus.

[13.] ¶ De anniuersarijs regum.

Item Collegiati vbi reges et principes sunt fundatores obseruant eorum dies anniuersarios. simpliciter tanquam pro canonico Sarum. quia Rubrice Sarum nullam faciunt mentionem pro huiusmodi fundatore.

Alij<sup>6</sup> affirmant quod vbi reges sunt fundatores eorum dies anniuersarij teneri debent cum omnibus obseruantijs solenniter. tam ad exequias quam ad missam. cum eisdem epistola tractu et euangelio sicut in anniuersario episcoporum Sarum.

¶ Responsio. Non latet vestram discretionem quin hoc esset contra ordinale Sarum.

(Clemens) Ista Responsio non valet. quia si episcopi Sarum fundatores habent solennes exequias more duplicis festi. quare non reges monasteriorum fundatores. cum de similibus simile erit iudicium.

[14.] ¶ De memoria sancti Iohannis baptiste in commemoratione s̄ci Pauli. [30 Jun. F.]

¶ In ordinali. Sarum Magdalena habet<sup>4</sup> symbolum in missa, quacunque feria contigerit. <sup>5</sup>non sic de sc̃a Anna. ergo earum comparatio est friuola vana et cassa. quod Clemens.<sup>5</sup>

In anniuersarijs trigintalibus in tempore pascali<sup>6</sup> contingentibus. quidam Collegiati tenent quod omni hebdomada incipiendum est a<sup>7</sup> j<sup>o</sup>. nocturno. et sic per hebdomadam dicuntur<sup>8</sup> Responsoria per hebdomadam per ordinem nocturnorum.

[20.] ¶ De benedictionibus in commemoratione beate Marie.<sup>10</sup>

Item per totum annum quando fit seruicium de commemoratione Marie.

Multi collegiati dicunt quod per singulas hebdomadas benedictiones ad ma<sup>11</sup>. debent variari sicut infra Oct. Assumptionis & natiuitatis eiusdem.

Alij affirmant quod per totum annum in ipsius commemoratione .iij. prime benedictiones tantum habende sunt absque variatione.<sup>11</sup>

¶ Responsio. Semper dicantur tres primæ.

[21.] ¶ De memoria de Trinitate.

Sed alij experti in vsu Sarum dicunt quod quamuis dominica differatur, tamen oportet quod fiat memoria de Trinitate ad vespervas ad mat. & ad missam propter octa. diem.

Et si istorum assertio sit vera tamen male intitulatur. Ad vespervas ant. Spes nostra. & ad mat. Libera nos. Nam ex consequenti sequeretur quod antiphona. O beata) in dominica diceretur super psalmum (Quicumque vult)

Quod est expresse contra Ordinale Sarum.

Multi dicunt quod sic. quia fratres mendicantes. & canonici regulares, habent<sup>6</sup> consecrationem fontium.

(Vt quid fiat consecratio fontium vbi non est baptismus.)

Alij affirmant quod fiet fons qui non durabit nisi per octo dies.

In vigilia epiphanie in laudibus. multi libri habent capitulum Apparuit gratia Dei) Et sic scribitur in quodam ordinali.

Item si festum Annunciationis in .ij. feria in hebdomada<sup>4</sup> pasce contigerit. Quidam dicunt quod festum celebrabitur in prima die mensis Aprilis.

Ad .iiij. vj. et .ix. omnia fiant sicut in alio festo.

Ecce quam manifeste dicunt contra ordinale Sarum.

[26.] ¶ De festis contingentibus in hebdomada penthecostes.

Si duo festa duplicia in hebdomada penthecostes contigerint<sup>7</sup> Nunquam possunt celebrari in .iiij. et .iiij. feria post festum Sancte Trinitatis cum singulis vesperis.<sup>8</sup>

Quidam dicunt quod sic quia in tali casu sufficit quod duplex festum habeat primas vesperas.

vbi conuenientius possunt celebrari debent differri. scilicet<sup>9</sup> vbi habere possunt vtrasque vespas.

Sed istud dictum videtur inconueniens. scilicet differri<sup>1</sup> festum duplex vsque post duas hebdomadas quando potest celebrari infra octo dies.

Nam quando festum maius duplex differtur vltra crastinum. semper debet differri vbi poterit habere vesp. vtrasque.<sup>3</sup> quamuis post duas hebdomadas.

[27.] ¶ De memoria festi trium lectionum cum memoria beate Marie.

Si duplex festum in .iij. feria post Trinitatem celebretur. tunc ad ijs. vesp. post memoriam de sancta Maria. scilicet Sub tuam. Nunquid potest fieri memoria de festo trium lectionum. & de octa. Trinitatis. an non.

Quidam dicunt quod talis memoria erit solennis propter memoriam beate Marie.

Alij dicunt quod fiet sub silentio cum memoria de octa.

¶ Responsio. Memoria de festo trium lec. & de octa. erunt sub silentio.

[28.] Si medie lectiones fiant vbi festum s̄i Hugonis est duplex [17 Nov. F.].

Quidam dicunt quod medie lec. erunt de sancto Aniano sicut habetur exemplum in /exaltatione sancte Crucis. [fo. A5.b.]

¶ Responsio. Isti verum dicunt quod nunquam fiant medie lectiones. si sit festum duplex.

[29.] ¶ Differentia<sup>4</sup> inter festum principale & maius duplex.

Item si aliqua differentia in ecclesia Sarum inter principale festum<sup>5</sup> et maius duplex.

Vel equalis cerimonia habenda est in vno que<sup>6</sup> nō in alio.

[30.] ¶ De thurificatione chori a dyacono.<sup>9</sup>

In festo sancti Clementis in ecclesia Sarum. legitur sic in epistola [Ad Philippens, iv. 2.]

(Adiuua illos qui mecum laborauerunt) et tamen dicunt quod<sup>5</sup> vera littera in biblia est (Adiuua illos que mecum<sup>6</sup>) et refertur ad duas mulieres. scilicet Euchodiam et Sinticen) que erant due matrone ministrantes Paulo et Clementi necessaria quando predicabant.<sup>7</sup>

¶ Responsio. vera est littera illos<sup>8</sup> et qui.

[32.] ¶ De Collectis in exequiis mortuorum.

In die sepulture quorumcunque, siue regis siue cardinalis in exequiis<sup>9</sup> dicuntur .iiij. collecte, & in missa .v. secundum vsum Sarum [33.] Pax non detur<sup>10</sup> in missis pro defunctis.

Sacerdos celebrans pro defunctis non debet post (Agnus Dei) pacem ab altari accipere. nec a calice secundum vsum Sarum.

[34.] ¶ De terminatione collecte de Trinitate.

Oratio de Trinitate secundum regulas determinatas. debet terminari cum (In qua viuus)

Tamen multi dicunt quod in ecclesia Sarum terminatur cum (Qui viuus).<sup>11</sup>

/Et si sic detur causa si placet.

[fo. A6.

Semper reincipiantur lec. et Sequentie de commemoratione beate Marie.

Similiter post oct. Nat[ivitat]is eiusdem [post 15 Sept.].

[37.] ¶ De memoria fienda de dominica in festis duplicibus. in .ij. feria. contingentibus.

Si aliquod festum duplex festum per estatem in .ij. feria contigerit. nunquam memoria de dominica erit solennis. preterquam in Exaltatione sancte Crucis. [14 Sept. E. sub lit. dom. D.]

Et ratio est quod<sup>2</sup> illa dominica caret vtrisque vesp[er]is.

Si in dominica post pasca fiat seruicium de dominica & in illis tribus hebdomadis non vacat nisi vna sola feria. Nunquid in illa feria Responsoriorum de .iij. feria. debeant cantari. vel debeant omitti propter vnum R[esponsoriu]m. repetendum.

[39.] ¶ De octa. Trinitatis.

[Duo sequentes pericopas omitt. 1497-1508.]

[40.] ¶ De versu Qui sedes.<sup>7</sup>

Clerici ecclesie Sarum dicunt quod maioris meriti est dicere infra octa. Corporis Christi V. Qui sedes ad dexteram) faciendo mentionem de Christi deitate in qua est patri equalis & immortalis, quam dicere (Qui de virgine) habendo memoriam de eius incarnatione, in qua est factus passibilis<sup>8</sup> & mortalis.

Veruntamen frustra iacitur rethe ante pedes pennatorum. [Proverb. i. 17.]

¶ Responso. Certum est quod vespere erunt de dominica infra octa. & memoria de huiusmodi festo. Nisi tale festum fuerit quod non habet primas vespervas.

Istam regulam falsi libri non habent. Et tamen est vera.

et est celebrandum sub maiori duplici festo vbicunque reliquie habentur. vel corpora mortuorum humata<sup>7</sup> sunt.

¶ Nota causam huius festi.

Quia licet sancta Ecclesia in eorum laudibus nihil solennizat.<sup>8</sup> tamen cuius honoris apud Deum sint ignoratur.

Patet per istam regulam quod merito deridendi sunt qui delyrando dicunt (Quorum reliquie in vniuersali continentur Ecclesia.)<sup>4</sup>

Quelibet ecclesia tenetur proprias reliquias<sup>9</sup> honorare.

[158.] ¶ Quodcunque festum in Dominica Reliquiarum contigerit. nulla de eo fiat memoria nisi priuatim de dominica et de Trinitate.

Festum Reliquiarum in ecclesia Sarisburiensi plures mutationes perpessum esse inuenimus. Seculo enim mediante duodecimo, diem pro hac celebratione ab antiquioribus receptam, utpote minus opportunam, in xv. Kal. Octobris, hoc est in xvii. Septembris, transtulit Jocelinus Sarum episcopus. Cui suffragatus est etiam Theobaldus Cantuariensis, Anglorum primas. (Vide in Registro sancti Osmundi, fo. 27b. = i. p. 227.) In anno Domini 1150, dominica post octauas Natiuitatis beate Mariae cecidit in xvii. diem Septembris. Rogerus porro de Mortuallis, Sarum episcopus, per statutum suum A.D. 1319, iterum transtulit festum Reliquiarum in dominicam proximam post diem Iulii vii. (Cf. Statuta Sarum, fo. 23 = p. 68.)

FRAGMENTS OF
Ordinale Sarum

PRINTED BY
[1477-8.]

About 1474-5 William Caxton (who had learnt printing at Cologne, and practised it with Colard Mansion at Bruges) entered the service of Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy, sister of K. Edward IV., and acted as her secretary. When the Duke was killed in January 1477 (or possibly a month or two before that disaster, as Blades supposed), Caxton returned to his native land, and set up his press at the Almosnery or Almonry at Westminster, south west of the Abbey Church, where the Lady Margaret, one of his patronesses, built certain almshouses.

The original of the fragments which are given as the text of the following pages was printed probably in the first year after his return to England in 1477-78. It is the subject of the famous cedula or advertisement, which is quoted below, on page 97, and of which a facsimile may be obtained from Mr. Froude at the Clarendon Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

THE CAXTON FRAGMENTS.

A.D. 1477-78.

Before we speak of Caxton's work and its remains, it may be well to prefix a few words of explanation upon the Pie itself.

ON THE NATURE AND CHARACTER OF "THE PIE."

The following observations are offered to any student who may be unfamiliar with the structure and purpose of the Pie :—

Easter Day may fall on any day in the five weeks from March 22nd to April 25th : in other words it may fall, in one year and another in the course of a long cycle of years on thirty-five different days.

Consequently a collection of thirty-five different almanacs will make a complete Pica or Directory sufficient to serve for every possible contingency.

But such a collection will involve some needless repetition, and will be unnecessarily bulky, especially if the fulness of its rules requires more than a single page (and, as in the case of the Sarum Pica, many pages) to be devoted to the regulations of each year.

It is found that for many consecutive weeks in the year (i.e. from July or August to the New Year or the following Epiphany) a set of directions which has done duty for any year which begins (let us say) upon a Sunday ('littera dominicalis A.') will serve again equally well for every one of the four other possible years in the collection on which January 1st is on a Sunday. And so in like manner in the case of the other Sunday-letters.

Three courses were open to the constructors of the book.
(1) They might have printed the kalendar and rules of each of the thirty-five years out at length, regardless of repetitions and reckless of expense and bulk. But this, clearly, they did not choose to do. (2) They might have printed the 'common' or overlapping piece (serving for the fall of the year) once for all for its own Sunday-letter on the first occasion on which it occurred in the collection; and then, on subsequent occasions, they might have spared repeating it, by the simple device of a cross reference.<sup>1</sup> (3) But instead of this they preferred to print the 'common' piece for each Sunday-letter under a heading to itself, distinct from all the five variable pieces to which it was adaptable, and to mark it with the number 6, or else to distinguish it by the absence of any numeral.

These 'common' or 'sixth' sections (one of them for each of the seven Sunday letters) make up the additional seven in the "35+7 sections" noticed in the text. It chanced that of the six years to which our four Caxton fragments bear reference, one third relate to these 'common' or 'sixth' sections (viz. to sextum D., and sextum F. respectively) and only four of the thirty-five variable portions (viz. 4D., 3F., 4F., and 5F.) are partially represented.

Supposing that it had been decreed for us that Easter Day should always be (like Christmas) upon one fixed day in the kalendar, e.g. upon the 27th of March, a single kalendar or almanac might be made to serve for every year in perpetuity with just a note to apply in case of a leap year coming round.

Or, if (on the ground that it is essential that we should keep Easter Day always upon a Sunday) it were further agreed to observe it either upon the 27th of March if that chanced to be the Sunday or upon the Sunday which fell next after it, in that case it would be requisite to make seven kalendars. In the first of these, New Year's day would fall on Saturday, in the next on Sunday, in the third on Monday, and so on, and a collection of seven almanacs in one volume, each being denoted by a single letter as follows, would (on these suppositions) suffice for every emergency.

<sup>1</sup> In the York Pie, printed in 1509, the kalendars 1A, 2A, 3A, 4A, run from 1 January to the end of July; 5A from 1 January to 31 December. The other four give a cross reference to 5A. So for the other Sunday letters. But those in the Sarum book begin with the Sunday after the Octave of Epiphany, and run on to the end of July for each of the 35 almanacks, adding a sixth septett from that time to the Octave of Epiphany following. In the York book the Sunday letters are arranged in what may be called either the natural or the scientific order, A G F E D C B. The Sarum book, which is, by the way, a much fuller work, takes the common alphabetical order A B C D E F G.

B.	Jan. 1,	on Saturday,	Easter Day	on March 27th.
A.	"	"	Sunday,	" April 2nd.
G.	"	"	Monday,	" April 1st.
F.	"	"	Tuesday,	" March 31st.
E.	"	"	Wednesday,	" March 30th.
D.	"	"	Thursday,	" March 29th.
C.	"	"	Friday,	" March 28th.

It would then be enough to ascertain, from a table or otherwise, which of the seven almanacs belongs to the current year, and to keep that open before us through the year; and we should find Sundays and holy days all marked, and the number of Sundays after Epiphany would be within an ace the same for every conceivable year,<sup>1</sup> and the Sundays after Trinity would be always six and twenty.

But as a matter of fact, after many searchings of heart, it was once for all determined for the Church that the great Festival of the Resurrection must not only be observed upon a Sunday, but must be the Lord's day following the fourteenth day of the kalendar moon which happens upon, or next after, the 21st of March. The inconstant moon being thus taken for our guide and mistress, it gives us a period of five weeks or thirty-five different days on either of which Easter Day may fall.

We therefore, under existing circumstances and arrangements, need sooner or later no less than five times as many various almanacs as would have sufficed supposing that Easter Day had depended upon a fixed day in the kalendar. It may fall upon any day between March 22nd and April 25th, or upon one of those two days themselves.

Instead of there being only one case in which Easter can occur in a year beginning on a Saturday, there are five such possibilities for it to do so, viz. :—

Either, 1B.	} Jan. 1, on Saturday,	March 27th	} being Easter Day,	(No. 6.)
or, 2B.		April 3rd		(No. 13.)
or again, 3B.		April 10th		(No. 20.)
or else, 4B.		April 17th		(No. 27.)
or lastly, 5B.		April 24th		(No. 34.)

And in like manner each Sunday-letter has five varieties, so that a series of thirty-five is made up between them, one almanac belonging to each of the thirty-five days on which Easter may possibly occur.

The complete 'Book of Almanacs' edited by Prof. Aug. De Morgan contains this series of thirty-five. The Pie (pica) or

Directorium Sacerdotum consists of a corresponding set of thirty-five 'declaraciones,' printed, not in the brief compass of a series of kalendars, but as sections or chapters of regulations in which the service is ordered week by week throughout each of the years in question. Or to speak more exactly, each of the thirty-five varying years is not printed out in full, but only that portion which is more immediately under the influence of Easter. A certain section of each twelvemonth, commencing in the season after Trinity and ending early in the following January, does not fall under the spell of the moon, but is common to all those years which have the same Sunday-letter; and such sections (which are, naturally, seven in number) do not require to be repeated in writing or printing five times over; but they form by themselves another class of seven, designated indifferently either 6B, 6A, 6G, &c., or simply B, A, G, &c. Thus the thirty-five parts of the Pie are in proportion shorter than the thirty-five corresponding almanacs,<sup>1</sup> but their number may be considered to be raised to forty-two if we count these adaptable common pieces as something separate. Of course the complete directory for any year consists of one of the numbered portions together with the (sixth or) unnumbered section which bears the same dominical letter. This last has to serve from August to New Year's Eve and to be continued, in the following year, to the Octave of Epiphany. Then 'Sextum A' would contain, at its end, a fortnight of a year which we should describe as having Sunday Letter G, and would be the beginning of one of the G Pie Kalendars of York. In the case of a leap-year a change is made on Feb. 25th, which becomes on that occasion the true feast of St. Matthias, and the almanac hitherto in hand is laid aside for the letter immediately preceding it in the alphabet (or in the case of A, for G).

For further elucidation of this matter we must look to Canon Cooke's forthcoming edition of the Pie or Directorium of 1487, which survives in a complete form. Some account of the weekly "commemorations" of Salisbury and other "Uses" will be given in a subsequent appendix.

It was then to a "Pie" or collection of these numerous working almanacs for liturgical use—anticipating Franceour (1842) and De Morgan (1851)—that the four Caxton fragments of 1477-8 belonged.

<sup>1</sup> In the Ordo Perpetuus Dominici Luchini, printed in Merati's revised edition of Gavanti Thesaurus (in Brev. Rom.), a 36th tabula is added, for the convenience of those requiring the kalendar for Leap Year DC. with the epact xxiv or xxv. The York Pie printed in 1509 has similarly an extra kalendar for Sunday Letter D in such a leap year, i.e. when Easter is

CAXTON, AND HIS EDITION.

The pages which follow are copied from the eight original printed leaves which are preserved in one of the volumes of Caxton Fragments in the British Museum ( $\frac{C. 40. I. I.}{5}$ ).

These are all that now remain to show the character of the book which is the subject of the scarcely less famous early advertisement of which one copy is found in the Douce collection at the Bodleian, Oxford, and another in the Spencer library now at Manchester :—

“ If it plesse any man spirituel or temporel to bye any | pyes of
 “ two and thre comemoracions of salisbury vse<sup>1</sup> | enpryntid after
 “ the forme of this present lettre whiche | ben wel and truly
 “ correct/late hym come to westmo- | nester in to the almonesrye
 “ at the reed pale<sup>2</sup> and he shal | haue them good chepe .: ”

The extant leaves of the pye or Ordinale run, or hang together, in pairs or half sheets, each pair of leaves containing four pages of consecutive matter, being, no doubt, in each case the two centre leaves of a quire ; but the context of one pair is not in immediate connexion with the context of the next. The volume when complete doubtless consisted of 35 + 7 divisions, and the surviving fragments give us pieces of 4 + 2 of these.<sup>3</sup> On a rough calculation I conclude that Caxton's Ordinale when complete consisted of about 15 quires or 240 pages.

on April 25th. For example A.D. 1736 in Old Style. In New Style it has not happened yet, nor will until the year 3784, the solitary instance before 4000, if it ever comes.

<sup>1</sup> The original Sarum Ordinale was probably a Pie of two commemorations suited for that Cathedral, which, being dedicated in honour of the Blessed Virgin, had at the most but two. The Ordinale as printed by Caxton in 1477, and likewise the Directorium of Clement Maydeston which Caxton printed in 1487, was a pie of two and three commemorations, which would serve not only for Salisbury but for any parish church. Here two are treated as the rule, and three as the exception or development. Again, the short pica included in the later editions of the printed Sarum Breviary was a pye of three commemorations ; but the rubrics of the breviary retained traces of the earlier rule, which recognized one or two commemorations only.

<sup>3</sup> The seven additional sections (of which two are partially represented in these fragments) are those which are designated ‘Sextum A,’ ‘Sextum B,’ ‘Sextum,’ &c.

However, though not consecutive,—or, in other words, belonging, as all the pairs do, to different almanacs or years,—these pieces, happily, when placed side by side, make out between them a good and sufficient working specimen of the lost book, although no two of the pieces belong to the same year of the pica Sarum.

We are in fact (if we may make such a comparison) in the position of an ornithologist who has placed before him a small find of the fossil remains of an extinct species of birds. Femur, tibiæ, phalanges, metatarsus, all belong to separate specimens: but there is not a bone existing in the entire frame but it has here its representative; and yet there is scarcely one of them in duplicate to spare.

The eight leaves, then, preserve (in part) four distinct portions of Caxton's original printed Ordinale. These portions relate to parts of six distinct sets of years, as follows:—

(i) Littera Dominicalis Quartum D: beginning at the close of Septuagesima week, and ending at the fifth Sunday after Trinity (in July), a period of twenty-one weeks. (4*D* answers to the twenty-second among the thirty-five kalendars in De Morgan's stereotyped 'Book of Almanacs'.)

(ii) Littera Dominicalis Sextum D: beginning with the Historia Peto Domine (i.e. the time when the Book of Tobit was read, in September), and reaching through the following Advent to the Octave of Epiphany in the year following, i.e. a year having Sunday Letter C. This fragment therefore gives rules for about seventeen weeks at a time of year quite distinct from that with which the previous fragment was concerned. (6*D* corresponds with the autumn and winter months at the end of either of the following almanacs in De Morgan's book, Nos. 1, 8, 15, 22, or 29, and a fortnight in January of Almanacs 7, 14, 21, 28, or 35. And 1*E*. is his kalendar No. 2.)

(iii) Littera Dominicalis Tercium F: from Palm Sunday to the eighth Sunday after Trinity (in July) and resuming, as was usual in such a case, with the Octave of Epiphany in Quartum F., where, after only a few lines of the last named section, this fragment breaks off. This third piece of the book gives eighteen weeks of 3*F.* and one week for 4*F.* It thus corresponds, so far as it goes, with kalendars Nos. 17 and 24 in De Morgan.

(iv) Littera Dominicalis Quintum F: from the third Sunday after Easter (12 May) to the sixth Sunday after Trinity (28 July); followed in due course by the opening weeks of Sextum F., which breaks off with the Historia Peto Domine in September. This fragment gives twelve weeks from 5*F.* and seven weeks from 6*F.* The former of these answers to almanac No. 31; the latter is common to Nos. 3, 10, 17, 24, and 31, for the fall of the year.

In reprinting: We expand Caxton's abbreviations. Thus we represent his "resp fel' pt'mittat'" by "responsorium feriale pretermittatur."

Letters or words [enclosed] in square brackets are used to indicate passages where the margin is torn or worm-eaten. In such cases the text has been restored by conjecture based upon a comparison with the MS. 'Add. 25,456' in the British Museum and with the printed 'Directorium' of 1495. We have introduced inverted commas to mark words from the services which Caxton's successors would have distinguished by red letters or initials.

'Gasc.' or 'Ga.' is used in the notes to mark various readings derived from the abovementioned MS. which bears the name of Dr. Thomas Gascoigne, for whom it was written by John Raynton. (See the Introduction to this volume.)

We proceed now to give the fragments in order, merely prefixing a few words of introduction or description in each case.

(i.)

The first of our Caxton fragments begins abruptly with a portion of a note appended to the week of Septuagesima. When the Golden Number is xvii, or ix or vi or i, and D the Sunday-letter, Sexagesima falls on Feb. 15th.

The opening sentence, of which only the latter portion is preserved in this fragment, does not occur in this context in Maydeston's Directorium, which came out about ten years later from Caxton's press, but I suppose it agrees in substance with a rule which is preserved elsewhere in the form of a rubric in the Sarum Breviary (i. p. ccccxcviii) 'Quodcunque autem festum iii lectionum in hac ebdomada, vel in duabus sequentibus ebdomadis contigerit, usque ad iiii. feriam in Capite Ieiunii, totum servitium fiat de festo, et hoc cum nocturno, et nulla fiat memoria de feria. A quarta vero feria in capite Jejunii usque in crastinum octavarum Pasche, neque servitium fiat de festo iii lectionum neque memoria nisi ad vespervas et ad matutinas de s̄ca Maria tantum, que precedet memoriam de sancto Spiritu.'

We may fairly supply the context from Gascoigne's (or Raynton's) MS. as follows :—

[C] Dominica in Septuagesima, tota cantetur historia.

(ii)

The second portion here preserved of Caxton's Ordinale Sarum 1477-8 supplies us with a specimen of the pica, or order, for the latter part of the year for the letter D. This served in common for all the years which have this Sunday letter, although the Sunday upon which it begins to be applicable differs for different years, as will be readily understood.

Thus in the following fragment of 'sextum D.' as it is called—

The second Sunday<sup>1</sup> of the 'History' Peto Domine (or lessons from the Book of Tobit) is fixed, whenever D is the Sunday letter, for 20th Sept., which occurs in the several years for which it is applicable, as follows. . . .

{ for 1D. on the xviiith Sunday after Trinity.
for 2D. on the xviith Sunday after Trinity.
for 3D. on the xvith Sunday after Trinity.
for 4D. on the xvth Sunday after Trinity.
for 5D. on the xivth Sunday after Trinity.

The Sunday of the 'History' Adonay (or lessons from Judith) is on 27th Sept. for the Sunday letter D., i.e. . . . . .

{ for 1D. on the xixth Sunday after Trinity.
for 2D. on the xviiith Sunday after Trinity.
for 3D. on the xviith Sunday after Trinity.
for 4D. on the xvith Sunday after Trinity.
for 5D. on the xvth Sunday after Trinity.

The 1st Sunday of the 'History' Adaperiat (or lessons from the Maccabees)<sup>2</sup> is on 4th October for the Sunday letter D., i.e. . . . . .

{ for 1D. on the xxth Sunday after Trinity.
for 2D. on the xixth Sunday after Trinity.
for 3D. on the xviiith Sunday after Trinity.
for 4D. on the xviith Sunday after Trinity.
for 5D. on the xvith Sunday after Trinity.

The 1st Sunday of the 'History' Vidi Dominum (or lessons from Ezekiel)<sup>3</sup> is on 1st November for the Sunday letter D., i.e. . . . . .

{ for 1D. on the xxivth Sunday after Trinity.
for 2D. on the xxiiird Sunday after Trinity.
for 3D. on the xxiind Sunday after Trinity.

The 1st Sunday of the 'History' Aspiciens (or the Advent lessons from Isaiah) is on 29th November for the Sunday letter D., i.e.	{	for 1D. on the 1 st Sunday in Advent.
		for 2D. on the 1 st Sunday in Advent.
		for 3D. on the 1 st Sunday in Advent.
		for 5D. on the 1 st Sunday in Advent.

This fragment ends with a small portion of the 'Historia Domine, ne in ira' (or lessons from the Epistles of St. Paul) for the 1st Sunday after Epiphany (i.e., 'Dominica infra octavas Epiphaniae') for a fresh section 'primum E,' where the said Sunday occurs on January 12th.

Our third fragment of Caxton's Ordinale of 1477-8 begins just before Palm Sunday for 3F., in other words for that set of years in which Easter Day is on the 7th of April and Palm Sunday falls on the last day of March.

This fragment thus carries us from the beginning of April to the end of the eighth week after Trinity, i.e. to Saturday, August 3rd, the book when complete having, according to its plan, no need to repeat the rules for the remainder of the year in question, as they had been given once for all for the latter weeks on any year which had F for its Sunday letter in a section headed 'Sextum F.'

Our fragment accordingly, of express purpose, makes a leap, from the forenamed Saturday in the beginning of the month of August of one year, to the rules for the commencement of another set of years designated 'Quartum F' (which would have Easter Day on April 14th), but, being fragmentary, it carries us no farther than Saturday, February 2nd.

The words requisite to commence the imperfect sentence at the beginning of this piece are '¶ Dominica in passione Domini, de ser-uicio. . . '

(iii.)

The last remaining portion of Caxton's Ordinale of 1477-8 comprises the concluding portion of 5F. and the first part of 6F. It is torn and imperfect in the right-hand corner at the bottom of both leaves.

The fragment begins (after the Friday following the Easter Octave) with the rule for the third Sunday after Easter (otherwise called dominica secunda post Octavas Paschae) i.e. May 12th in the year 5F., when Easter Day has fallen on the 21st of April; and it carries us on to the sixth Sunday after Trinity (July 28th) in the same year. At the end of that week the year indeed proceeds, but the title is changed from 5F. to what is designated "sextum F." This distinctive heading is used simply because the section which follows was so constructed as to serve in common not for 5F. alone but likewise for all the other years (1F., 2F., 3F., 4F.) which have F. for their Sunday letter.

As regards this last-named section of our concluding fragment it may be convenient here to note that—

The 1st Sunday of the History In principio , or lessons from 'Sapientia Ecclesiastici,' for years with Sunday letter F., falls on August 4th, and is .	{	for 1F. on the xi th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 2F. on the x th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 3F. on the ix th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 4F. on the viii th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 5F. on the vii th Sunday after Trinity.
The 1st Sunday of the History Si bona , or lessons from the Book of Job, for years with Sunday letter F., falls on 1st September, and is . . . .	{	for 1F. on the xv th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 2F. on the xiv th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 3F. on the xiii th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 4F. on the xii th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 5F. on the xi th Sunday after Trinity.
The 1st Sunday of the History Peto, Domine , or lessons from the Book of Tobit, for years with Sunday letter F., falls on the 15th September, and is .	{	for 1F. on the xvii th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 2F. on the xvi th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 3F. on the xv th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 4F. on the xiv th Sunday after Trinity.
		for 5F. on the xiii th Sunday after Trinity.

The rule for this last-mentioned 'historia' is practically complete in the present fragment, as it lacks at the end only the four words "ad missam de Jejunió."

It should be observed that another of our fragments (No. ii, see pp. 102-7) commenced with the second Sunday of the Historia Peto, Domine, just the very week where this present fragment ends (although, of course, for a different Sunday letter).

On the whole therefore we may congratulate ourselves on our good fortune in the preservation of these fragments, as we cannot have the complete book or even the rule for one year entire by itself.

Failing the perfect specimen, it is something to have the species perfectly represented, and no part missing, though the several members are supplied from six imperfect specimens distinct one from another.

[QUINTUM F.]

The words requisite to complete the opening sentences of this fragment may be thus supplied from Gascoigne's MS. Add MS. 25,456, lf. 74<sup>b</sup>, li. 21.

APPENDIX I.

REGULA DE HISTORIIS
INCHOANDIS.

The following extract, taken from John Raynton's MS. in the British Museum (Add. 25,456), the same which supplies the text of the Crede Michi, or the set of articles discussed by experts, in an early form, will suffice to show what was the character of the Pie or Ordinale before Caxton undertook to produce it in a printed form.

It gives the rule for a single year when the Sunday letter is A, and the golden number either xv, xiiij, or viij.

Raynton's MS. may be dated about 1450-55.

Excepting where we mark the variations in the footnotes, we find that this rule corresponds (so far at least as regards the weekly commemorations) with the double set of rules printed in the Sarum Breviary of 1531 (i. pp. mcccxli, mcccxlvi, &c., &c.). In other words it contemplates a commemoration of St. Thomas of Canterbury, as also Caxton's Ordinale and Maydestone's Directorium do.

(ii.) Tenor verborum Cronice Cestrencis de prefato Osmundo mentionem faciens talis est:

Hoc anno id est A.D. 1077 Hermannus primus episcopus Sarisburiensis obiit. Cui successit Osmundus Regis Cancellarius .xxiiij. annis. qui ecclesiam novam ibidem construxit, clericos insignes tam litteris quam cantu aggregavit. Ita ut ipsemet episcopus libros scribere, ligare, et illuminare non fastidiret. Hic quoque composuit librum ordinalem quem consuetudinarium vocant, quo fere nunc tota Anglia, Wallia, utitur, et Hibernia; dictavit etiam vitam sancti Aldelmi.

(v.) As a specimen of the later Chronicles we may cite Raphael Holinshed, on William the Conqueror.

‘ In this kings daies also liued Osmond the second bishop of Salisburie, who compiled the church seruice, which in times past they commonlie called after Salisburie vse.’

Chronicles, 1587, iii. p. 15<sup>b</sup>.

The length of time (more than 200 years) which was allowed to elapse between Bp. Poore's application to Rome for Osmund's canonization and its actual accomplishment may account for the development of the tradition which attributes to his authorship not only the ‘Instituta’ but ‘the church service, called after Salisburie vse.’

However, I am convinced that we still have to look for the text of some Sarum Ordinale, distinct at once from Bp. Poore's tractatus, or Custom-Book, and likewise from the thirty-five-fold Ordinalia, whether the ‘shorter ordinal,’ or the shortest Regula de historiis.

There must (I feel sure) have existed, and there may (I think) still exist, a ‘true Ordinal’ of Sarum use; such a book that is, as Bp Grandisson adapted for Exeter early in the fourteenth century.

PRELIMINARY NOTE.

It should be observed that the following rules de Historiis are part of a 'Pye of one and two commemorations,' to serve (that is) at once ubi non agitur de festo loci (as at Salisbury Cathedral), and likewise ubi agitur de festo loci, as in the majority of churches, viz., those with a dedication other than that of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The reader will see at once that this rule was drawn up before the time when a weekly commemoration of St. Thomas of Canterbury, the martyr, had been introduced; in other words, these regulations belong to the period when the Cathedral Church of Salisbury had only a single weekly commemoration, that of the Blessed Virgin, and no other church had more than two.

He will be surprised to notice how sparingly any commemoration at all is noted for the weeks covered by these rules either in the sections devoted to Salisbury and to other Churches which like it were dedicated in honour of St. Mary ("ubi non agitur de festo loci"), or in the other sections suited to the majority of parochial and other churches which owned some other dedication (ubi agitur de festo loci). I must leave it to the reader not only to investigate the causes such as may have occasioned the omission of commemorations in certain cases (where whole weeks appear to have been left entirely devoid of them), but also to discover, if it be possible, the reasons which assigned to the particular day or days in each week such commemorations as do occur.

The following rules may be thus summarized so far as they concern the weekly commemorations; but it must be borne in mind that these supplied only one portion of their raison d'être.<sup>1</sup> The silence, therefore, of these rules about commemorations in any week does not prove conclusively that there was none in the week in question.

The sections corresponding to the several 'histories' of the latter portion of the summer half year when lessons at mattins were read from

ON THE FEAST OF THE DEDICATION OF SALISBURY CATHEDRAL.

In other churches dedicated in honour of St. Mary, her commemoration will be on Saturday, Oct. 2nd, but at Salisbury itself on Tuesday, Sept. 28th, because the octave of the anniversary of the Dedication of the Cathedral Church in that place would have begun by October. Such is the rule on p. 145, lit. C.

As we have observed already of the Feast of Relicks at Salisbury (p. 72 n.), so also there is a difficulty about fixing the date of the dedication day. The altar of the Ever Blessed Trinity and All Saints, in what in modern times would be called the pro-cathedral, now the

Lady Chapel, was dedicated on Sept. 28th, 1225.<sup>1</sup> The feast of the Dedication of the Church, after the high altar was built, is (naturally) not mentioned in the Custom Book of Bishop Ri. Poore, although in later revisions of it there are some incidental references to the festival, in capp. 19, 21. It is somewhat strange that most kalendars of Sarum Use do not record the actual Festum Dedicationis, although the service-books abundantly testify to the fact of its celebration.

Fortunately, however, there is at least a single exception. In the calendar of a MS. Sarum Processionale of the fifteenth century, now in the Chapter Library, Salisbury (No. 148), under Sept. 30th, after 'S̄ci Jeronimi' is written 'Dedicatio ecclesie cathedralis Sarum.'<sup>2</sup> Whytford also, in the Syon Martiloge (1526) fo. cviii., informs us that 'the dedication of the chirche of Salisbury' was observed on Sept. 30th, following (as Mr. Dewick tells us) the latin Martirologium of his House (now Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 22,285). On the other hand a manuscript, Lives of English Saints, in the Cambridge University Library (Add. 3041), assigned by Mr. Jenkinson to Nicholas Roscarrock (about 1600), has in the kalendar prefixed to it

New Salisburie church. Sept. 20th, 1258.

And this is the date given by Rich. Jones (Fasti Sarisb., p. 89).

A tablet noticed by Leland says that the church was begun April 29th, 1219 (rather April 28th, 1220), and finished March 25th, 1260.

A rubric in the Sarum Breviary, i. p. mcxcvii., indicates the date somewhat mysteriously when it tells how in the year of our Lord 1383 (littera dominicali 1 D.) the feast of St. Jerome was translated (from Sept. 30th), to (or on) the morrow of the octave of the dedication of the church of Salisbury, which, if the MS. Processionale is correct, would mean October 8th.<sup>3</sup> The rubric from the Breviary is of special interest as a

If Salisbury dedication were on Sept. 20th, the morrow of its octave would be the 28th, which could hardly affect St. Jerome's day. If on the 22nd, its octave would be Michaelmas Day, which might conceivably displace St. Jerome, a lesser double. But if on the 30th, D is Octob. 4.

Mr. Owen in his Sanctorale Catholicum, p. 393, gives September 28th for the dedication day of the Cathedral of 'St. Peter' at Salisbury, 1258, on the authority of 'Sarum Martvr.' This, however, must be due to an oversight.

landmark in the history of that service-book, because the case to which it refers (1D.) occurred only in the years 1136, 1183, 1478 and 1573. We may safely then date the Rubrica Magna, or at least this portion of it, between 1383-1478.

The passage about 'lit. dom. D.' is not found in the Sarum portiforium, P.E., printed by J. le Blanc for Merlin, Paris, 1557. It is contained however in part in the book printed for Aberdeen in 1510, only the words 'ecclesie Sarum . . . mccc.lxxxiii.' are naturally omitted and the paragraph ends, with the page, 'altera infra octa dedicacio. differtur.'

The 28th was the day of the dedication of the altar at the extreme east in 1225.

The Directorium (1495) has two notes near Trinity Sunday, under 2 D. (where there are xxvi. Sundays after Trinity), as follows:—'Vna sola dominica differatur per estatem. Scilicet infra octa. Assumptionis beate Marie' (viz., Aug. 16th, lit. dom. D.). And, 'Tamen hic potest bene vna dominica differri. nisi vbi Dedicacio Ecclesie in dominica contigerit.' But under 1 D., where there are xxvii. Sundays, the rule is, 'Due Dominice per estatem differantur. Vna infra octa. Corporis Christi, et alia infra oct. beate Marie' (i.e., on May 24th, and Sept. 13th). Clement Maydeston has told us that the rule about the dedication occurring on a Sunday refers really only to Salisbury itself. (See above, pp. 125-133), so that we are precluded from supposing that the exception noted in the Directorium related only to other churches. Hence we may conclude that at Salisbury the feast fell upon letter D. in September in Clement Maydeston's time. And this would fit Sept. 20th (the Vigil of St. Matthew) the date given in the Cambridge MS. (Add. 3041) mentioned above. On the other hand it is impossible to doubt such an authority as the Kalendar of the Canons' Processionale at Salisbury, which places the Feast ten days later (littera G), and thus we are driven to suppose that the date of the Dedication Festival, as well as that of the feast of Relicks was, upon some occasion, altered.

The date given in the MS. Processionale is further established by some rules for the 'historia Adonay' under the Sunday Letters C and D, in a fourteenth century MS. Sarum Breviary now at Peterhouse, Cambridge.

"Responsorium feriale non dicatur in choro Sarum quia in iij. feria [28 Sept.] fiat commem. beate Marie ibidem propter Oct. Dedicacionis ecclesie Sarum, que sunt cum regimine chori. Sed alibi dicatur [R̃. feriale] in iij. feria." This implies that Saturday, October 2nd, would be a day within the Dedication Octave cum regimine chori. Again, "Lit. Dom. D. v. Kal. Octob. tota cantetur historia. R̃ feriale non dicatur in choro Sarum, et feria ii. [28 Sept.] fiat commem. beate Marie ibidem, propter octa. dedicacionis ecclesie Sar. Sed alibi dicatur in ij. feria." This implies that at Salisbury, Saturday, October 3rd, would be a day within the Dedication Octave cum regimine chori. Therefore at that date the Dedication Festival may have been September 30th, and cannot have been September 20th. It is noticeable also that the portos of 1519 in the pie for Adonay, lit. Dom. D, gives only two commemorations, Monday and Saturday, and omits that on Friday, October 2nd. However, to serve for Salisbury, it ought to have omitted the Saturday as well.

In 1536 the 1st Sunday in October was by Convocation appointed to be kept in place of any other Dedication Feast throughout the realm.<sup>1</sup> And this was ratified by the King's first Injunctions, No. 1.

The 'Commemoration of Founders, Benefactors, and Worthies of the Cathedral Church of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Salisbury' is now observed annually on the Tuesday after All Saints' Day.

ALTHOUGH the well known short pie was not introduced into our breviaries until 1501, and was still treated as a supplement as late as 1507, I find that the earliest complete copy of any printed edition<sup>2</sup> contains a rule of the same character, which it describes in such terms as may, perhaps, be taken to imply that it was a new composition at the end of the 15th century.

Early in the 18th century, Thomas Baker, the famous antiquary and socius eiectus of St. John's College, Cambridge, made some notes on a fly-leaf in his copy of W. de Worde's Sarum portiforium, pars estivalis, 1509 (now in the library of that College, T. 8. 25), specifying the Mozarabic missal and breviary of 1500 and 1502, as 'Two scarce Books, and hard to be met with.' He notes also,

'Breviarium secundum ordinem Sarum magna diligentia Venetiis impressum per Magistrum Reynaldum de nouiomagio Alamannum. anno Dom. Incarn: MCCCCLXXXIII. x. Kal: Oct. Membran: 8<sup>vo</sup> in Bibliotheca publica Cant: Class: C: 14: 31.

W<sup>ch</sup> I take to be the first edition of this Breviary.'

At some subsequent time this vellum breviary of 1483 was stolen from the Cambridge University Library: and having passed into the hands of Count de MacCarthy, it found its way (by purchase, about 1825) into the great library at Paris, where, rebound in two volumes, it is, 'Vélins 1685, et 1686.'

In 1866, HENRY BRADSHAW discovered what other searchers had in vain tried to find, namely, the clue to its identity, and was thus enabled to enter in his note book,

"Sarum Breviary, Venice, 1483. Leaf 2a has C. 14 remaining of our mark . . . Early in the 16th century some one has written on the last page of text—

Nam videt antitonans cuncta futura deus.’

So much for Dr. Combe’s conscience.”<sup>1</sup>

As we have irretrievably lost the original, it is with the greater pleasure that I offer the Society a fairly full description of the volume with such extracts as either belong to our present subject, or, like the rubrica de graciis, relate to Bradshaw’s favourite studies.

We are fortunate in having a transcript of the title, and a brief description of the two volumes from the eminent author of Histoire du Bréviaire Romain, the Abbé P. Batiffol, Doct.L. Also M. Samuel Berger, whose labours on the text of the Sacred Scriptures are likewise highly appreciated in this country, has very kindly undertaken the work of transcribing such portions as I desired, with some assistance from M. César Meyer.

I., but still in its natural order.

[Regula de hystoriis]

[(i.) Nihil dicitur hic de prima historia, scilicet Deus omnium.]

[(ii.) Dominica prima post quinto kal. augusti semper incipienda est hystoria In principio.

Et notandum est quod inuenta est una regula que deseruit ad inueniendam hystoriam a mense augusti usque ad aduentum domini: et quando incipienda est cum memoria propter aliquod festum duplex impediens: et quando tota hystoria cantabitur: et quando responsorium feriale dicetur: et quando dicendum est de sancta maria: et quando de festo loci: et quando aliquod festum nouem lectionum differetur in crastinum vel in secundam feriam propter inchoationem hystorie.

We print this here partly because it is one of the very few things which some of the Sarum portiforia contain in addition to what the Great Breviary of 1531, and consequently the Cambridge edition, supplies: partly also because of the intense interest which HENRY BRADSHAW took in 'the Grace that shuld be said affore mete and after Mete,' a topic which would always fire him with animation.

'If your object' (he said) 'is to give people of the present day an idea of the meaning of these things, it is almost useless to print them straight as they are. . . . You may remember that at Trinity even now it takes two people to say what is substantially the same Grace as this.'

The sections are as follows:—

Before Dinner 'all the Times in the Year, on Fisshe Dayes, in vigilia Pasche, in Die Pasche. Post Prandium or Common Days, on Fast Days, Easter Eve, Easter Day. Short Graces affore Dynor or on common days. Short grace after Dynor and after Soper bothe. Grace affore Soper, et post cenam for Common Days and for Easter Day.' (See H. Bradshaw's Scheme of Latin Graces in Furnivall's edition of 'the Babees Book, Manners and Meals in Olden Time.' Early Eng. Text Soc. 1868, pp. 382-5.)

¶ Rubrica de gratiis dicendis tam ad cenam quam ad prandium per totum annum et per omne tempus.

ON WEEKLY COMMEMORATIONS.

I. RISE OF COMMEMORATIONS.

WE may trace the origin of weekly Commemorations, which we find in existence in England in the thirteenth and following centuries, to the spirit which, even in earlier ages, had devoted the altar Service of certain days of the week to the memorial of certain special mysteries.

The observance of the Lord's Day and the Saturday is traced by Bingham (and others) to very early times (Antiq. xx. iii.); and he traces likewise the appointment of Wednesday and Friday as stationary days (xiii. ix. 1-4. xxi. iii. 1, 6.). But the rediscovery of the Didache, since his day, has given us new evidence relating to early ante-nicene Christian institutes. We find, already established by the close of the first century of our era, three solemn service days in every week, 'the Lord's Own Day' (Did. c. 14 § 1.) and the Wednesday and Friday (Did. c. 8 § 1.), 'tetras' and 'parasceve,' answering to the three Synagogue days, Sabbath, Monday, and Thursday,<sup>1</sup> but expressly distinguished from them. The Apostolic Constitutions (vii. 23.) supply the rationale of the Christian celebration, viz. the memory of the Betrayal and of the Crucifixion for the fast days, and of the Resurrection for the Sunday. It is added moreover that the Saturday also is to be kept by Christians as a festival in memory of Creation (excepting only Easter Eve which is a fast in commemoration of our Lord's Burial). This threefold weekly commemoration may be traced in the three weekly masses with proper epistles and gospels provided in the Latin missals, and in the rubric prefixed to the Litany in the English Book of Common Prayer.

The early ritualist Amalarius Fortunatus of Trêves (who died in 837) connected with the days of the week various periods in the life of the Church, from Apostolic times to the future union of Jews and Gentiles under one Shepherd. (De Eccl. Officiis iv. capp. 11-17.)

<sup>1</sup> It is said that Moses went up to Sinai the second time on a Thursday and came down again on a Monday. See Kitto's Bible Dict., s.v. 'Fasts,' and commentators on St. Luke v. 33.

A design to attach special commemorations to all the several days of the week for the altar service, in case no holy day intervened, is traced by the medieval ritualists to two famous men of our own nationality in the latter part of the eighth century. Sicardus cir. 1180-90, followed about a century later by Durandus, relates how in the days when heresy was rife, and before the Sunday office was established, Boniface of Maintz (our Winfrid of Crediton) applied to Alcuin of York, 'the master of Charles the Great,' to devise a series of masses to confirm the faithful. It was not until at least twelve years after the martyrdom of Boniface that Alcuin is supposed to have been introduced to Charles, so we may view this tradition with something of suspicion.<sup>1</sup> There is moreover a little uncertainty about the order of the series, as the following table will show. But in any case we have a record of a comparatively antient scheme.

5. The list of votive masses in the Leofric Missal (earliest handwriting, early tenth cent., brought to England 1042), pp. 176-8. Those marked with an obelus † are ascribed to Alcuin.

6. The list of Prefaces in Leofric Missal, p. 266, 10th-11th handwriting "C," and likewise the Votive Masses in Missal of Robert of Jumièges, A.D. 1044-51.

7. List of 'misse votive, sive communes' in rubric of a printed Sarum Missale (1526) ed. Dickinson, p. 735*.

Although the later missals contain offices 'Pro inspiratione divinae Sapientiae, and the like, and the prefaces to French breviaries of the eighteenth century contain a scheme of what perhaps I may call moral commemorations, or intentions, for the ferial office; nevertheless it was very natural that those 'common' commemorations which were based upon a personal or objective theme took, in the ordinances of the church, a firmer root than did the masses 'de Sapientia' or 'de Caritate.'<sup>1</sup>

We have a glimpse of the practice in our own country in the interval between Alcuin and Beleth or Sicardus. The Concordia regularis which was formerly, on conjecture, attributed to St. Dunstan, and which is now shown to belong to Ethelwold Bp. of

Winchester (cir. 965), tells us what were the ordinary subjects of devotion before the Norman Conquest. At the mattin office prayer and psalmody was offered by each one pro seipso: then for the King and Queen, for friends (pro familiaribus) and for the faithful Departed. At Lauds an antiphon de Cruce, de S. Maria, and de Sancto loci or for the consecration of the church. Lauds were sung de omnibus sanctis with an antiphon of that saint at whose 'porticus' the station was made.

The rules for the morrow-mass and the high mass are no less interesting than those for the daily office. The morrow-mass is to be (according to apostolic and modern English practice) pro Rege, but on Sunday, as an ordinary rule, de Trinitate. The rule for the missa principalis prescribed, with a certain emphasis, that it should invariably be de Cruce on Fridays, and de Sancta Maria on Saturdays, unless some holy day interfered with this arrangement.

This order which bears St. Dunstan's name at once emphasizes just those commemorations in which all the columns of our list agree, and at the same time contains the germ of all those commemorations whose development in later ages we shall presently attempt to trace.

Of commemorations in the time of St. Osmund at Sarum I am unable to give any trustworthy account. But, if the Leofric Missal and that of Robert of Jumièges may be taken as fair specimens of the mass-books used in this country in the time of Edward the Confessor and his successor, I would point to the lists of votive masses and prefaces contained therein and noted in columns 5 and 6 of our table as generally confirming the statements of Sicardus and Durandus about the system ascribed to Alcuin, who is recognised as the composer of the majority of these votive masses. I may add that there is in the Leofric Missal (ed. Warren), p. 183, another group of three votive masses which, though somewhat displaced from the rest, yet cling to one another, and thus far corroborate the statement of Sicardus tabulated in the 4th column. I mean the masses pro Pace, pro Peccatis, and de quacunque tribulatione ('Salus populi.') populo christiano (baptizatis).

		sacerdotibus (et gradibus fraternitate).
		pace (populorum et) regum.

It is no less interesting to observe that there is in Leofric's collection another group somewhat earlier (and indeed immediately following the hebdomadal masses of our 5th column), and that this corresponds closely with the requirements of the Regularis Concordia. These are Missa in ecclesia quorum reliquie ibidem continentur, Missa cotidiana in honore Omnium Sanctorum, Ad suffragia sanctorum postulanda, and Missa pro Regibus.

I will ask the reader now to pass on to the first quarter of the thirteenth century.

St. Hugh of Lincoln had been dead for several years, and Sicardus of Cremona had more recently passed away, when Richard Poore, Bishop of Sarum, dedicated three altars in the new building or pro-cathedral at Salisbury (28 Sept. 1225), which became in after days the Lady Chapel. In the central or most easterly part of the building was the altar of Holy Trinity and All Saints: in the northern limb was that of St. Peter and All Apostles: and in the southern, the altar of St. Stephen and All Martyrs. On the following day (Michaelmas) the primate, Stephen Langton, preached to the assembled crowds, upon the dedication; and among those present was Edmund Rich of Abingdon, Treasurer of Sarum. A former archdeacon of Wilts, Robert Grosseteste, who had already removed to the diocese of Lincoln as Archdeacon of Northampton, had sent a tunic and dalmatic of white diaper as an offering to the new church of his old diocese. Bishop Richard Poore had given an endowment for the clerks of the altar of Trinity and All Saints, and for the light 'round about it'; and he had made an offering of two silver candlesticks and other ornaments on behalf of Gundreda de Warren, deceased. From that day forward the Mass of the Blessed Virgin was celebrated daily at that altar; and thus the Lady Chapel or eastern limb of the cathedral at Salisbury came to be known as "Salve chapel,"<sup>1</sup> on account of the votive mass 'Salve, sancta parens enixa.'<sup>2</sup> The fact that Bishop Richard Poore first ordained "oure lady masse" was not only duly commemorated in the form of 'Bidding the bedes' used at Salisbury in the fifteenth century, a fact of which the importance has been pointed out by HENRY BRADSHAW,<sup>1</sup> but a tablet in the chapel itself, where it was seen by Leland in 1540, testified that the Bishop 'founded the mass of the B. Mary V. to be solemnly celebrated every day in this chapel, and assigned the rectory of Laverstock to its endowment.'<sup>2</sup>

At the daily mass in the Lady Chapel at Salisbury the 'officium Salve' was said on by far the greatest number of days in the year. Only in Advent it was replaced by the mass Rorate celi and again from Christmas to Candlemas by Vultum tuum deprecabuntur. Neither of these is quite identical with Alcuin's Saturday Lady-mass, but it has the same collect as the mass Salve regina.

The daily mass in conventu was not the only commemoration of the Blessed Virgin in the church of our Lady at Salisbury. Besides Lady Day in Summer and in Harvest, Candlemas in February, and her Nativity in September, and an increasing array of other festivals in her honour,<sup>3</sup> there were other offices to celebrate the Mother of our Lord.

Although Bishop Poore had been soon promoted to Durham, and Dean W. de Wanda had passed away, their successors carried on the noble work of the new Cathedral; and it was hallowed by Archbishop Boniface in the time of Bishop Giles de Bridport, 20 September, 1258. Various altars were sooner or later dedicated, besides the three original altars in the Lady Chapel. The rubrics of the Breviary mention the altars of SS. Martin, Katherine, Mary Magdalene, Innocents, Thomas the Martyr (d. 1170), Andrew, John, Margaret, and Laurence; likewise (in the Sanctorale) those of St. Anne, St. Edmund Bishop (d. 1240) St. Edmund K.M., Edward K.M., Michael and Nicholas.<sup>4</sup> But it was in the choir and at the 'great,' 'highest,'

<sup>3</sup> Feast of the Conception (8 Dec.), ordered in 1328. A vigil was attached to the Nativity of the B. Virgin in 1380. Feast of St. Anne in 1383. Supplements of the Visitation (2 July), and Presentation (21 Nov.) were written or printed about 1480. The service De Compassione in 1487. The old Dedication of Churches ad præsepe ('de Nivibus,') and the Pantheon ('ad Martyres') met with more or less notice in the English Kalendar. Sicardus speaks of the feast of the Nativity of the Virgin as modern and of the Conception as 'non authentica.'

<sup>4</sup> See the two Indices generales to the Cambridge edition of the Sarum Breviary in fasciculis i, iii. To these we may add the 'Relicks Altar' of St. John Baptist, the 'Works Altar' (fabrice) of Holy Cross, the altar of St. George and St. Denys, and an altar of St. Osmund probably added about 1460.

'principal,' or 'authentic' altar that certain of these services were said or sung.<sup>1</sup> Vespers and Mattins of St. Mary were said daily throughout the year either in choir or out of it (Brev. Sarum i. p. xxxiv.). If on any day it had been pretermitted in choir on account of some festival, then on the morrow it was to be said in conventu.<sup>2</sup> The Hours of the Blessed Virgin, as Bradshaw tells us, 'originated in a special commemorative service to be used during Advent in connexion with devotion to the Incarnation,'<sup>3</sup> and when the laity had been relieved from the use of the full hour-service of the Breviary, and devotion to the Mother of our Lord increased, the 'Advent Hours of the Incarnation' took 'the name of Hours of the Blessed Virgin used constantly throughout the year.'

This 'little office' or hours of our Lady dating from about the seventh or eighth century had been revised by Peter Damian, A.D. 1056. The Mattins and Vespers were said, usually in choir, at Salisbury and elsewhere before those of the day, and the other hours of the Virgin after the corresponding day-hours. And by a canon of the council of Clermont in 1096, it had been made obligatory upon the secular clergy to recite this (originally monastic) office.

Besides this little office and the daily Lady Mass and the memorials or suffrage of the Blessed Virgin, introduced in the canonical services, there was a longer or 'full service' of commemoration recited every week. This consisted of a service both in choir and at the altar. The former is the Officium plenum de commemoratione B. Mariæ.<sup>4</sup> The weekly commemoration service at the high altar was the mass Salve (or Rorate, or Vultum),

<sup>2</sup> When a Sunday Mass was pretermitted at the high altar on account of some more important celebration, it was usual to say the Sunday mass upon some week day at an altar in the chevet ('in capitulo'), at which service the cathedral body was bound to be fully represented. In like manner certain offices of the B. Virgin or of the Departed were occasionally removed from choir to the Lady Chapel, and were said to be performed in conventu, much as altar services were said to be performed in capitulo; such at least is the perplexing problem. It may be rash to argue from the appearance of the Lady Chapel since its renovation by Wyatt in 1789, but there are two noticeable features which possibly may have been suggested by older work which he removed: the indication of dedication crosses on the interior of the walls, and the stall-work. I am inclined to think that such seats (only of a more practical kind) were provided in the Lady Chapel for the use of the conventus saying offices of our Lady, or of the Dead, extra chorum. Cf. p. 209.

still sometimes known as the 'votive' mass of the B. Virgin, although it long ago ceased to be anything but fixed by authority and obligatory.<sup>1</sup> This commemoration of the B. Virgin is mentioned thrice incidentally in the early thirteenth century custom-book of Bp. R. Poore (Osmund Register i. pp. 36, 112, 180), and a later statute (1319) clearly states that it was said once a week, and in choir.<sup>2</sup>

It was in fact the Saturday commemoration, which Alcuin had helped to establish. Five reasons why the Saturday was suitable for this commemoration are detailed by the medieval ritualists, who, to a great extent, repeat one another.<sup>3</sup> The passage in the form in which Durandus left it is quoted bodily in the rubric of the Sarum Missal (pp. 759*, 760*, ed. Dickinson).

The great rubrics in the Breviary (pp. lxx, dcccclxxviii, mclxxxv) prescribe that this weekly celebration should be held upon a Saturday if possible, or, in case some important holy day interferes, on some other day of the week which is most convenient.

It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the task of practically applying this phrase, 'ubi convenientius possit celebrari,' to the perpetual almanac has supplied their raison d'être to the Directorium and the Sarum Pie.

II. OF THE COMMEMORATIONS PREVIOUS TO THE XVTH CENTURY.

While the 'exceeding high speared steeple and double crosse yles' of Salisbury were still new, and when Durandus the pupil of 'Ostiensis' was still engaged in the service of the pope, and had not yet been consecrated to the see of Mende in the Ceven-

<sup>1</sup> Besides the mass Salve, which was the daily mass of the B.V. Mary out of Advent and Christmas, and likewise appointed for her 'full service' of commemoration, having the collect 'Concede nos,' p. 779*, there was another variety, with the collect 'Deus, qui virginali aulam' appointed for the Vigil of the Assumption, p. 863. Of the mass Rorate there were likewise two varieties: that for the Ember Wednesday in Advent with Or. Presta, quesumus, omnipotens Deus, ut redemptionis, p. 29; and the other with Or. Deus, qui de B.M. virginis, appointed for the Annunciation, and likewise for the daily mass in Advent de beata, pp. 726, 761*. Again the mass Vultum tuum, which is the Christmas-tide commemoration-mass de B.V. Maria, with the collect 'Deus, qui salutis eterne,' p. 768*, has a counterpart in the Commune Virginum, with Or. Deus, qui, ut humanum, p. 727*.

<sup>2</sup> So far as the Plenum Servitium of the Breviary is concerned, it was said in Advent once a week in conventu instead of in choir; except in the Advent ember week, when Mattins of the little office was said in conventu on one day in place of the commemorative or 'full service.'

<sup>3</sup> Beleth Explic., cap. 51, gives two reasons, and so Sicardi Mitræ viii. 1. Durandi Rationale V. i. 31-35, adds three others.

nes, we have an opportunity of observing what was the practice at Lincoln, the only cathedral church in England beside Salisbury, which at that date was dedicated in honour of the Blessed Virgin as a single dedication. If Lincoln had tamely followed Sarum rules, it would have been content (in that era) with the single Saturday commemoration which is prescribed in the Sarum rubric for churches dedicated in honour of the Blessed Mary.

But the last year of the twelfth century had seen the obsequies of the great and brave Hugh of Lincoln, attended by King John and by three archbishops and numerous other prelates, and followed by the lamentations of Jewish as well as of Christian mourners. In 1220, while Salisbury Lady Chapel was still in building, his canonization had been decreed;<sup>1</sup> and sixty years later the translation of his relics was carried into effect. It is to the years 1278, 1279 (just before the translation of St. Hugh) that the earliest extant fragments of the quaintly named rolls of re et ve belong.

Though somewhat elaborate in detail, these rolls are in their main purpose very simple. The object being to reckon the allowances for wine and commons due to every member of the chapter, it became necessary to employ a clerk to keep a record of the departure and return (recedendi et veniendi) of every canon who had 'protested,' or declared his intention to keep, statutable residence for the year, as well as of the attendance of those who came up to Lincoln to keep their fortnight's residence in their turn, fulfilling the duty of their prebend or making the first attendance of a new canon taking his commons on installation.

These records when complete, for the year conventionally beginning from Holy Cross Day in September (the time of the Lincoln audit), consisted of four membranes of parchment, or a like number of long sheets of paper, each containing the kalendar and notes for about eleven weeks, together with a 'rotulus quintus' to account for the odd weeks just before the compotus was made up; and these were all sewed together.

A specimen of one week, the third in the 'primus rotulus' of Jordan de Ingham, 1278, will show the character of the document which, when complete, must have measured some 9 or 10 feet <sup>1</sup> There are three bulls of Honorius III. for the canonization of St. Hugh and to establish the feast of his Translation.

1. Honorius, &c. Non repulit Dominus. (to Bishop, Chapter, Clergy and people of Lincoln), 17 Feb. 1220.

2. Honorius, &c. Divinæ dignatio pietatis. (to all the Faithful), 17 Feb. 1220.

3. Honorius, &c. Cum venerabile corpus B. Hugonis. (to Bp. of Lincoln). Viterbii, 1220.

in length.<sup>1</sup> Being 10 inches in width it cannot be reproduced here line by line, as our 8vo. page is insufficient. Suffice it to say that each week contains practically four records: (a) a list of resident canons, in double column, whose payment is marked by the words 'habet' or 'habent,' and some dots which, as I conjecture, mark their presence at mass; (b) a third column, of greater width in the original, notes the goings and comings in the current week. This I have judged it best to print below the list of names. (c) A long line or two of notes written across the sheet gave a brief Lincoln kalendar for the week, Sunday, holy days, obits (marked by a theta) and a few other commemorations where attendance or absence affected allowances. This I break up in column. And finally there was (d) another long line giving the totals disbursed by the clerk of re and ve.

The back of the roll was utilized a few years later for a draft audit account. The rolls of Re and Ve, as I have explained elsewhere, continued to be drawn out until the beginning of the troubles in the time of K. Charles I. and Abp. Laud, the obits only being omitted in such later rolls.

The year 1278 had B for its Sunday letter, and the week selected as a specimen began on October 2nd. It will be observed that it is two or three years too early to note the translation of St. Hugh, a day which never became thoroughly incorporated in the Sarum books, although for Salisbury cathedral the observance of his 'Depositio' was enjoined somewhat later by a statute of Bp. Roger de Mortival (cap. 38, A.D. 1319), who had been Dean of Lincoln.

<sup>2</sup> In 1278 Bp. Grosseteste had been already dead five and twenty years. Oliver Sutton was Dean, and Bishop Richard de Gravesend had committed to writing (probably in 1260), those traditional customs which composed the Lincoln Consuetudinarium de divinis officiis, in which however no notice is taken of the commemorations.

Looking through what remains of the membranes for this and the following year I find that, with scarcely an exception, two items recur in every week.

On Mondays . . . . . " ſc̃i Hugonis "

On Saturdays . . . . . " ſalue."

<sup>1</sup> Anthony Beck or Bek the elder, Bp. of Durham (consecrated 9 Jan. 1284), King of Man and patriarch of Jerusalem, held preferment also at St. Paul's, and at York and Durham, before he became Bishop. He died 3 Mar. 1310-11. He paid the expenses of the Translation of St. William of York in 1284, as his elder brother Thomas (who had held the prebend of Castor in Lincoln Cathedral before he became Bp. of St. David's), defrayed the cost of the Translation of St. Hugh in 1280. We are not told in Hardy's Fasti, which was the prebend or dignity to which A. Beck the elder was installed at Lincoln on Friday, 7 Oct. 1278.

Only they are both dropped in Christmas and Epiphany weeks. Eastertide is unfortunately wanting for both these years.<sup>1</sup> In the third and fourth weeks in Advent 'Rorate' takes the place of 'Salve,' but it is on the Monday, Dec. 12th, and Thursday, Dec. 22nd (in place of the Saturday), St. Hugh's commemoration being discontinued throughout Advent as well as Christmas. Neither is the Blessed Virgin noticed in the first or second week of Advent. At the Tuesday in the second week, Dec. 6th, the following curious note appears :

O Christi pietas. c. sol. dispersi in chorum."

i.e. the sum of £5 was to be distributed among the choir present at the singing of the Anthem to Magnificat at (second) vespers of St. Nicholas.<sup>2</sup>

Before we pass away from the Lincoln commemorations, which appear as these two alone (viz., of St. Hugh's and of the Blessed Virgin's) in all the rolls and "bookes" which I have examined from 1278 to 1642, it may be observed that twice again we meet with the weekly commemoration of St. Hugh in other places :

In making statutes for Lincoln College, Oxford (2 Feb. 1479), T. Rotherham, at that time Bp. of Lincoln, made an express provision (cap. 8) for the commemoration of St. Hugh by a peculiar arrangement to which we shall have occasion to refer when we come to speak of three commemorations.

When holding a visitation of 'the Royal College of B. Mary of Eton, by Windsor,' John Longland, Bp. of Lincoln, referred to a weekly commemoration of St. Hugh in 1527.

I have not succeeded in finding a copy of the form used in choir for this commemoration, but among the thirteenth century additions to a mutilated twelfth century missal belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln there is a mass of St. Hugh.<sup>3</sup> It corresponds, so far as it goes, with the form provided for his 'Depositio' (Nov. 17) in the Sarum Missale (ed. Forbes), pp. 971-2.

<sup>1</sup> I find however in a fragment of the Roll for 1526, that there is no commem. of St. Hugh in Lent or in Easter week. The mass Salve occurs on Mondays in Lent. Lady Day is transferred to Monday, March 26th (Palm Sunday falling on the 25th), and on the 27th (Tu. before Easter) is 'Commemoracio fidelium.' On Thursday after the Easter octave is the 'missa Resurrexi.'

<sup>2</sup> As it bears upon the theory that N. or M. stands properly and originally for Nicholas and Mary (notwithstanding that the bride is N. in our English marriage service), I may observe that these two names are so abbreviated in this roll of 1278.

A more interesting relic is the fifteenth century (Lincoln) supplement to a missale (cir. 1400) which appears to have been in use in Lincoln diocese in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries (now Brit. Mus. MS. Add. 11,414).<sup>2</sup>

The kalendar, though scarcely distinguishable from those of Sarum use, was clearly written for a church in Lincoln diocese, as it contains the Translation of St. Hugh, and his 'Depositio' as a festum duplex.

At the end of the volume eleven kyries occupy leaves 275-7. Sequences, 277<sup>b</sup>-305<sup>b</sup>; Postcommunions, &c., 306-8. The centre of leaf 309<sup>a, b</sup> is filled with the epistle 'Fratres. Benedictus Deus et Pater,' 2 ad Cor. i, 3—5, which is like the Sarum epistle in tribulacione cordis (ed. Round this, which is the concluding leaf, is written in the margin the 'officiū reliquiarum' (the Sarum form). On a fly leaf are

On lf. 310<sup>b</sup> is the collect of the translation of St. Richard, Conf. (June 16).

It would not be very difficult to construct a form of commemoration for St. Hugh in choro, since rules for making such a service are prescribed in the Sarum Breviary in the great rubric de commemorationibus (i. p. lxxviii.) although the Sarum people would have said that it was absurd for Lincoln to have any local commemoration in addition to that of the Saturday, as the Cathedral was the Church of the Blessed Mary of Lincoln. Salisbury itself ranked as a church where there was only one commemoration (ibid. and cf. iii. p. 987), and about any further commemoration the Sarum Ordinale said little or nothing.<sup>1</sup>

The rubric however aimed at providing also for those numerous churches which had been dedicated 'in honour of some other Saint than St. Mary.' It made allowance for the fact that it 'is customary to have full service in choir once in every week for the local feast,' like that of the B. Virgin, with first vespers (but not second) and with rulers of the choir, on some convenient day, only so as not to interfere either with her commemoration or with any holy-day which might occur in the week.

Information about churches of this second class is not far to seek.

Let us see then what was being done in Christ Church monastery at Canterbury in 1285 when John Peckham was archbishop, and Henry Eastry was prior, and just before Guillaume Durand became Bishop of Mende.

<sup>1</sup> The exceptions considered in the rubric are as follows. In the commemoration of St. John the Baptist his vigil collect was said, and in those of St. Peter and Paul the octave collect, and in the All Saints' commemoration an anthem differing from the general rule is prescribed and selected for the sake of some special appropriateness.

The Prior reports to K. Edward I. that it is their custom to celebrate on his behalf three masses daily.

1. de Beata Virgine.

2. de Sancto Thoma martyre.

3. de beatis Dunstano, Blasio, Aelphego et omnibus sanctis; one of these four being commemorated daily in rotation; also that thrice a week a mass, 'de Reliquiis,' for the four in conjunction was said by the keeper of the tomb of St. Thomas the martyr, with the collect, 'Propitiare quesumus Domine, nobis famulis tuis per sanctorum tuorum Elphagi, Blasii atque Dunstani et Omnium sanctorum merita,' &c.<sup>1</sup>

Here we find evidence of the practice for which the Sarum rubric made provision, only in a case where there was almost a superfluity of local saints; and we see also the germ of that third commemoration which we shall have to consider presently in a later section. But in this monastic church there is nothing said about any weekly commemoration of the feast of the title of the church. Is it the case that the 'S. Salvatoris festum' (24 May) had not yet been instituted?

I cannot say how early the custom to which reference is made in the Sarum rubric arose in parochial, prebendal, or collegiate churches, to assign one day in the week to the commemoration of the festum loci other than St. Mary. In the fourteenth century we find it in full vigour. Thus the ordinale which John de Grandisson drew up for his Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul at Exeter, from Exeter and Sarum customs, and which he prescribed for his college of Ottery St. Mary's, in 1337, contains directions that there should be every week, if possible, commemorations of

The Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, on Thursday.

The Blessed Mary, on Saturday.<sup>2</sup>

It was only a year later that Michael, abbot of St. Albans, wrote to the Benedictine nuns of Sopwell St. Mary's, Herts, a cell of St. Alban's abbey, charging them that they ought to observe, as the custom had been to do it, the weekly commemoration of St. Alban, on Thursday ('le Jeofdy, si voide soit').<sup>3</sup>

And we may say as a general rule that, in the fourteenth century, churches in England dedicated to St. Mary kept one weekly commemoration, that of St. Mary on Saturday ; while churches with a different dedication observed two commemorations every week, viz. :—

Commemoratio Festi loci on Thursday, and Commemoratio B. Mariæ on Saturday.

In the following table I place first a list of the common or commemorative masses of Hereford use in the fourteenth century, as a connecting link with our previous table (see p. 161) ; also a similar list from one of the collegiate societies at Cambridge, and such an account of monastic commemoration masses at Westminster Abbey as I can collect. After this will be placed a series of commemorations, all earlier than 1390, and belonging to the period when one or two commemorations (in choir, &c.) were generally observed.

No. 10. The Westminster Mass Book, of N. Lytlington, cir. 1362–86, contains, besides the commemorations entered in this table as more or less expressly appropriated to certain days (for which see Missale Westm., ii., pp. 656, 491, 1110, 1114, 1117; 659), a considerable number of masses which it styles, in one place or another, commemorationes. These are de S. Spiritu, de Apostolis Petro et Paulo, de S. Petro, S. Thome, de S. Edwardo (confessore), Reliquiarum, S. Benedicti. Also two others which may possibly have had this name: De Incarnacione Domini, and De omnibus Sanctis (ibid. ii., pp. 491, 493, 508, 1112, 1129, 1132, 1134, 1137, 1139, 1141). As missas fratrum priuatas, the rubric (p. 491) enumerates 'de Trinitate, vel de S. Spiritu, aut de B. Maria, vel de Angelis aut de Apostolis siue de Reliquijs,' and (perhaps) de Cruce, which would make a seventh.

Special masses, apart from those formal commemoraciones, which form the main subject of this appendix, were from time to time appointed for certain particular days of the week.<sup>1</sup>

Thus in 1295 (May 4), Robert, Abp. of Canterbury, writes to Anian, Bp. of Bangor, requiring special masses ('missam peculiarem') ordinarily to be said in his cathedral, and in the collegiate and parochial churches of his diocese, on Wednesdays, pro Terrae Sanctae subsidio, and on Friday pro statu Regis et regni Angliae, cum officio Salus populi, et orationibus propriis. On these and other weekdays, moreover, priest and people were to kneel directly before Pax Domini and say Ps. Deus venerunt, Deus misereatur, and Ad de levavi, with preces and orisons between, 'rotunde sine nota.' Also on Friday the bells were to ring and litany and procession to precede the mass Salus populi. (Councils, Haddan and Stubbs, i. p. 615.)<sup>2</sup>

S.	Missa de Trinitate.
M.	" de Angelis.
Tu.	" de sancto David.
W.	" de Pace.
Th.	" de sancto Andrea.
F.	" de Cruce.
Sat.	" de Spiritu Sancto.

(Dugdale, Monast. vi. p. 1388.)

<sup>2</sup> There are at least six varieties of the mass with the Introit Salus populi in the Sarum Missal. They may be distinguished by their Collects.

Thus Salus populi, the 'votive or common weekly mass for Tuesday (p. 735*) with which we have to do, has Or. Deus qui caritatis. p. 741*.

Salus populi for Thursday after 'Oculi' (3. Quadrag.) has Or. Concede, p. 201.

Salus populi for the XIXth Sunday after Trinity has Or. Dirigat corda, p. 515.

Salus populi Pro serenitate aeris, has Or. Ad te nos. p. 802*.

Salus populi Contra mortalitatem hominum, has Or. Deus, qui imminuentem Nineuitis. p. 810*.

Salus populi Pro peste animalium, has Or. Deus, qui laboribus. p. 812.*

In the missal rubrics the votive mass is classed with commemorations, pp. 9, 18, 96, 783*. It was said in procession on Rogation Tuesday (p. 409). Rules for its five or three collects are given on pp. 5-7. Its grail, p. 9.

In the Ordinale of Wells, composed about 1240, and written in the Red Book cir. 1310-20, commemorations of the B. Virgin and of St. Andrew, are twice mentioned, pp. 27, 50. It is, however, only from analogy that I can assign them to Saturday and Thursday respectively.

At Lincoln there was as early as the middle of the thirteenth century another institution, which deserves to be mentioned in this place. A daily "morrow mass," 'missa matutinalis,' 'summo mane,' was endowed in 1252 by Roger de Weseham, Bp. of Cov. and Lichfield, a former Dean of Lincoln, with the following intentions. Sunday, de die; Thursday, de Sancto Spiritu; Saturday, de Beata virgine; and for the remaining four days of the week, pro animabus episcoporum Lincoln et Lichf., ac decanorum Lincoln., necnon omnium fidelium defunctorum. (Ant. Beek's Book, A. 2.2. cir. 1335. lf. 23a.)

Radulphus de Rivo of Breda, dean of Tongres about 1400-1403, recognises the Saturday office of the Blessed Virgin, but he says that 'solenniores ecclesiae et religiosi illud non observant.' He adds that a mass de Patrono is admissible 'in septimanis vacantibus,' but that such a commemoration ought not (in his opinion at least) to be extended to the principal Hours, 'lest too great an inroad be made upon the ferial office: and we have nothing in black and white, nor indeed any precedent, sufficient to assure us that such a thing may with propriety be done.' De Canonum observantia, Prop. 20.

III.—OF TWO OR THREE COMMEMORATIONS.<sup>1</sup>

In the last decade of the fourteenth century a change was introduced which raised the number of commemorations in churches (like Salisbury) dedicated to the Blessed Virgin to two, and in churches of miscellaneous dedications to three.

And hence Caxton's provision for men 'spiritual or temporel' of 'pyes of two and three commemorations of salisbury vse.'

For the convenience of the reader I will place here a table relating to this later period.

<sup>1</sup> It is to the Weekly Commemorations (No. 4 of those distinguished on p. 186 below) that the Appendixes in this book refer, although we have included in the early history of commemorations some notice of masses assigned to certain days of the week without any corresponding choir offices.

The Memorials or Suffrages (No. 1 on p. 186) deserve separate treatment hereafter. Their use was in course of time abridged (as Mr. Frere points out). See letter of the Chapter of Northampton, A.D. 1343, cap. 1. Reyner, Appendix III, p. 152.

It was to the older condition of things that the Sarum breviary rubric, which we have already quoted, refers. So likewise do the rubrics, 'ubi fiunt commemorationes,' prefixed to the autumnal 'histories' from Wisdom (In principio), Job (Si bona), and the rest.

It will have been observed that already in one of the northern dioceses the measure accorded by Sarum-use had not been deemed sufficient. In the days of 'one and two commemorations,' Lincoln (St. Mary's) had not been content with one, and had, of mere devotion, added St. Hugh's on Monday. I cannot say how early it was that Hereford fixed its commemorations which we find in use in the sixteenth century; but it will be observed that over and above the universal Saturday commemoration of St. Mary there are two of local use, St. Ethelbert and St. Thomas (Cantilupe) the Confessor, who died 25 Aug. 1282, and had been canonized in 1310. But there was a more famous St. Thomas, who had been martyred at Canterbury 29 Dec. 1170, and canonized in 1173. Neither at Lincoln nor yet at Hereford does he appear to have received more recognition than the observance of his annual feasts. But in the end of K. Richard II.'s reign, in 1398, Roger Walden, Abp. of Canterbury, pending the deposition and banishment of Arundel, published a decree that every week a commemoration of Thomas of Canterbury Martyr be observed, on 'Tuesday, if possible, or otherwise on some other day of the week, under the rule of the commemoration of the Feast of the Place.'<sup>1</sup>

William of Wykeham, in his statutes for his College of St. Mary Winton, near Winchester (1400), says nothing of any commemoration of Becket, though he mentions incidentally the 'plenum servitium de S. Maria' (rubr. 29). K. Henry VI., however, in accommodating Wykeham's statutes for his own Royal Colleges at Cambridge (1443, cap. 42) and Eton (1444 cap. 31), gives for the fourth of the seven daily masses a rule differing from the Winchester order, and supplies in that place a set of missae communes for a week, viz.: Sunday, de Trinitate; Monday, de Angelis; Tuesday, de S. Thoma Martyre; Wednes-

In a single tome of Dugdale's monasticon, a mere superficial examination thereof has produced a considerable list of societies dedicated in honour of St. Thomas the Martyr; and it appears that a considerable proportion of these were founded between 1175 and 1200. I may name these Abbeys: Beauchief, Derby; Hagnaby, Lincoln; West Langdon, Kent; Holme Lacy, Hereford.—Hospitals: Stamford; Sandwich; Peterborough; York; Southwark; St. Thomas of Acon, or Acre, London. Of parish churches, Precentor Venables has found, in Lincolnshire, seven of St. Thomas the Martyr, to four of St. Thomas the Apostle.

The order of Abp. Walden did not run in York, and there they had a commemoration of St. William on Tuesday (as of St. Thomas Cantilupe in the sixteenth century, at Hereford on Thursday). Lincoln also which had a 'Use' of its own, likewise disregarded the order of 1398, so far as I can learn, and could plead that they had provided themselves with an <sup>1</sup> So Heywood and Wright print the word both at p. 115 and at p. 563, Ancient Laws for Kings Coll. and Eton, 1850, but dulcissimo or sanctissimo must be the word required. Of course there was a Lady Mass every day at all these colleges for the early mass; so there is none de Domina for the fourth mass on Saturdays.

<sup>2</sup> As an instance of what was considered a suitable disposition of daily masses by a private person in the sixteenth century, we may cite the provisions of the will made by Henry Lord Marney in 1523 and proved 15 June, 1525. Having arranged for an almshouse for five bedesmen who are to say our Lady's Psalter and De profundis daily, in Layer Marney church (St. Mary's), Essex, and on Wednesday and Friday afternoons Dirige, or else our Lady's Psalter, he directs that two priests, for whom a lodging is provided over the almshouse, shall say respectively the masses following every week:

	I.	II.
S.	de Nativit. Dñi* ... ..	de Annunziat. dñe.*
M.	de Spiritu Scto() ... ..	de Nativit. dñe.
Tu.	de Trinitate* ... ..	de Conceptione dñe.
W.	de Resurrectione* ... ..	de Purificatione.*
Th.	de Corpore Xpi ... ..	de Assumptione dñe.*
F.	de quinque Vulneribus ... ..	de Cruce.
Sat.	de Omnibus Sanctis ... ..	de Requite.

Sir N. Harris Nicolas, Testamenta Vetusta, p. 611, after Dugdale's Transcript.

I have marked with an asterisk those masses three of which (together with a like number of masses 'de Epiphania' and 'de Ascensione') made up a 'Trental of St. Gregory.' See the Sarum Missale, p. 883.* Only the trigintale has three masses of Pentecost instead of the votive mass 'de Spiritu Sancto.' Sir N. H. Nicolas gives a mass of the Nativity of our Lord on Monday in the 2nd column, as well as on Sunday in the first. I think this must be a mistake for 'dominae,' as it comes among Lady Masses, and the analogy of the trental suggests the same emendation.

additional commemoration a century or two before the commemoration of St. Thomas M. was devised. But in other places his memory was introduced on the Thursday, so that the most that a bishop of Lincoln could do, when giving statutes to his college and parish church at Oxford in 1479, was to prescribe that St. Hugh of Lincoln should divide the honours on that day of the week with St. Thomas, each taking a commemoration once a fortnight (somewhat as the Canterbury saints had a mass apiece once in four days).

The printed Sarum breviaries from 1492 onwards to 1556—so many at least as have been examined by me—or for me—all contain a service, 'In commemoratione sancti Thome archiepiscopi' (or martyris), excepting only the two King-Harry breviaries of 1541 and 1543-44, which of course were governed by the royal injunction of 1539 forbidding the honour of St. Thomas.<sup>1</sup> With the exception of those few years (1539-49) we may say that wherever Sarum use was enforced from 1498 to 1557 the churches which were dedicated in honour of the Blessed Virgin had two commemorations, viz. :—

1. 'Mary V.' on Saturday.
2. 'St. Thomas, Abp. Martyr' on Thursday, while those which had some other dedication had three commemorations, viz. :—

1. 'De B. Maria V.' on Saturday.
2. 'De S. Thoma M.' on Thursday.
3. 'De festo loci,' on Tuesday,<sup>2</sup> and it was the purpose of Caxton's Ordinale to make provision for both these classes.<sup>3</sup>

It remains only to add that the Sarum breviary, in all its editions, from 1492 onward, provides a commemoration of St. Chad (for use at Lichfield), and from 1509 (if not earlier) one for Etheldreda V. 'secundum usum ecclesie Elyensis.'

<sup>3</sup> An instance of three commemorations, across the Border, may be seen in the Aberdeen Breviary printed at Edinburgh in 1509-10. These are 'Commemoratio sancti loci, sancti Thome martyris, et B. Marie.' (P.E. Temporale fo. xiii. b.) The service for the third of these is given ibid. Psalt. &c. fo. cxv. b. &c., and for the first, a 'Commemoratio sancti Andree' is duly provided, Psalt. &c. fo. cxxxi. b. cxxxi.

special class, being attached respectively to the great festivals of the two Apostles and of All Saints.

I have mentioned in a note to the Sarum Breviary (iii., p. lxxiv. Introd.) that St. Osmund of Salisbury, although he died at the close of the eleventh century, was not canonized until 1456. No notice is taken of him in the MSS. Missals and Breviaries of the thirteenth or fourteenth century, nor is provision made for his second feast (16 July) in some of the earlier printed service-books of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

A service In Commemoratione S. Osmundi (doubtless for weekly use) is introduced in the Sanctorale, with the office for his translation, in the later Breviaries (see iii., 485-490), at least as early as 1519, although in the preceding year it had not sufficient authority to make its way into the Great Legenda. It is natural to suppose that this office was written for use at Salisbury itself (as well as for any churches which might have St. Osmund's name in their dedication titles); but I have not as yet found any proof of its actual use.

There is, however, something which amounts to presumptive evidence. A fine breviary, noted, written for Arlingham church, Gloucestershire, cir. 1460 (now MS. 152, in Salisbury Cathedral library) has certain supplementary offices, fo. 366-384, viz.—‘In Visitacione s̄cæ Marie virginis,’ fo. 366. Rubric relating to Festum Reliquiarum within the octave, fo. 369<sup>b</sup>. The Ant. Suscipe cum gaudio, &c. (in Festo S. Osmundi, 16° Jul. ut in Brev. iii. 471) cum nota, fo. 372<sup>b</sup>. (A leaf cut out.) Lessons ii. and v. of St. Osmund's Translation are smeared with red. Lessons viii-ix. with subdivision varying from ed. 1531, fasc. iii, p. 481. The form for St. Osmund's Commemoration (which concerns us here) follows at fo. 377<sup>b</sup>, (as in 1531, iii, 485). Then on p. 379 ‘Oct. idus Augusti fiat servicium de Transfiguracione Iesu.’ And lastly, fo. 384, the music for the Michaelmas hymn ‘Christe sanctorum’ for four voices, ‘triplex,’ ‘medius,’ ‘tenor,’ and ‘bassus.’

Possibly the Sarum people may have taken a leaf out of the Lincoln book and introduced a Monday commemoration; or else we may suppose that in process of time they adopted a commemoratio de Festo Loci on Tuesday as in other places.

If they did so, they thereby reduced the Pie of two commemorations to be but a dead letter.

ON SOME VOTIVE MASSES AT SALISBURY IN THE XIIIITH CENTURY.

(i.) At St. John's Chapel, Harnham Bridge.

Since this Appendix has been in type I have noticed in a late fifteenth century MS., now belonging to the Bishop of Salisbury, a transcript of a Sarum document which gives a list of votive masses arranged in the middle of the thirteenth century.

Robert de Byngheham, who had succeeded Ri. Poore as Bishop in 1229, founds, 14 Oct. 1245, the Hospital of St. Nicholas, with a chapel dedicated in honour of St. John Baptist on Harnham Bridge, Salisbury. He appoints a Warden and three other priests, and thus defines their duties. (Miscellanea et Statuta quoad Sarum fo. 23<sup>b</sup>, 24) :—

1. One Chaplain to celebrate mass every day, 'mane, diluculo,' specially for the Founder, and all the faithful, with Placebo, Dirige, and commendation at the proper hour ; at the Bridge Chapel.

2. Another, at the same chapel, to say mass daily, about the third hour, as follows (when no feast of nine lessons occurs) :—

- S. prout ipsius diei requirit officium.
- M. de S. Spiritu.
- Tu. de S. Johanne Bapt. (de festo loci).
- W. pro Benefactoribus (hospitalis vel pontis).
- Th. Salus populi.
- F. de Cruce.
- Sat. de Virgine gloriosa.

3. The hospital Chaplain, whose duty is to minister to the sick, the penitent, and dying, is to sing mass daily, 'post solis ortum, cum diei claritas circa altare refulserit,' for Brethren and Sisters, Benefactors of the hospital, and for any who may have died that day.

4. The Warden himself has his duties at the chapel of St. Nicholas, 'juxta hospitale,' 'ad pontem de Ayleswade,' where he is to celebrate mass and to sing the Divine Office after the custom observed in the cathedral ('maiore Ecclesia') ; saving that he is not bound to say mattins 'de nocte.'

(ii.) At St. Edmund's Altar, in the Cathedral Church.

About twenty-five years later (cir. 1270) Walter Scammel, Treasurer of Salisbury, and subsequently Dean and Bishop, instituted a daily mass at the altar of St. Edmund the Confessor, which is believed to have stood in the middle bay of the great northern transept, as follows :—

- S. de Trinitate
- M. de Sancto Spiritu
- Tu. } pro Defunctis
- W. }
- Th. }
- F. de S. Cruce
- Sat. de B. Virgine

(See Jones and Macray's Sarum Charters, &c., p. 350, and for R. de Bingham, ibid. pp. 297-8). These two lists do not give us much fresh information, but they give rather earlier information for Salisbury than I had found elsewhere ; and thus they may serve as a connexion between pp. 161 and 177 in the foregoing appendix.

FORMULAE QUAEDAM DE COMMEMORATIONIBUS.

WE propose in this appendix to add some examples of the offices of weekly commemorations with which the Pica is so closely concerned.

(A) It seems à priori most probable that the Commemoration of the Blessed Virgin was the earliest instituted, and at Salisbury Cathedral it was, naturally, for some length of time the only one admitted for use. Hers is in point of fact the only weekly commemoration noticed in the early thirteenth century consuetudinarium. Accordingly we will bring forward in the first place a specimen from a comparatively early service-book, which contains this single commemoration, and none other. Being written for monastic use it comprises twelve lessons at Mattins. Considerable portions of these may be recognised among the alternative lessons for this commemoration (passages ascribed to St. Augustine and the Venerable Bede) in the (secular) Sarum Breviary, as printed at a later date.

This order is extracted from an early twelfth century St. Albans Breviary in the British Museum.

(B) Where a church had not been dedicated in honour of the Blessed Virgin as its titular patron saint, a form of commemoratio festi loci was sooner or later provided.

These forms would naturally bear the name of the saint or other dedication in the books when they were written, but Mr. Procter has drawn my attention to a singular instance where the generic title is preserved.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The Aberdeen Breviary printed in 1510, and re-printed under the editorship of Rev. W. J. Blew, is interesting and explicit. In the Rubrica Magna after Trinity Temporale, P.E., fo. xiiij<sup>ba</sup>, where the Sarum Breviary (I. p. mclxxxviii.) speaks only of two commemorations, the Aberdeen book definitely mentions three, viz.:

Commem. Sancti loci, Sancti thome mart. and

and in each volume at the end of the Commune, fo. cxxxi-ii. it provides the office for the weekly Commemoration of St. Andrew. The canon, or inchoate

It is in a Breviary which in its general features belongs to Sarum use, and was for the most part written about A.D. 1400. It has however a sixteenth century supplement, which marks its connexion with some Brigittine community. Besides the offices for the Translation, Natale, and Canonization of St. Bridget, there is a Commemoratio beate Brigitte (without lessons but with rhyming antiphons, and a hymn :—

O celebre conuiuium
in cuius refectorijs :
electi desiderium implent et sunt in solijs &c.)

After which follows :—

/IN COMMEMORACIONE DE FESTO LOCI. /Brit. Mus.
Reg. 2A.xiv.
fo. 277b.

Ad Laudes.

V. In resurrectione tua, Christe.

R. Celi et terra letentur. Alleluia.

Ps. Dominus regnauit.

The form proceeds with the Capitulum 'Christus resurgens,' the hymn 'Sermone blando,' and so on through lauds, prime, sext, and nones, precisely as the services for Low Sunday in the Sarum Breviary i. pp. dcccxi—dcccxiv. excepting that the Ant. to Benedictus is 'Et valde mane' and the Collect 'Deus qui per unigenitum,' as on Easter Day, or as in a memoria de Resurrectione. The Chapter at terce is 'Christus resurgens,' and at sext 'Christus semel,' and at nones, 'Christus resurrexit.'

I should have been inclined to suspect that there was an error in the heading 'de festo loci,' but that there is a rubric at the end 'Infra Septuagesimam hec omnia sine Alleluia,' which proves that it is not an Easter service misplaced, but really (as it professes to be) a commemoration for constant use.

It is, I believe, the commemoration for the Brigittine Church of St. Saviour at Syon, where the festum loci was Resurrectio Domini. (See MS. Martyrologium of Syon in British Museum, Add. MS. 22,285 fo. 14.)

So far as my acquaintance with the printed Directorium or pie extends, I am led to believe that as a general rule when there were three commemorations for a church professing to follow Sarum use, Saturday was the day prescribed for the commemoration of the Blessed Virgin (or, failing that, some other day as near as possible to the latter end of the week). The commemoratio festi loci usually came as the middle day of the three.<sup>1</sup> But this was not universally the case. In an introduction to the Cambridge edition of the Sarum Breviary iii. pp. lxxii., lxxiv., I have already cited two or three passages from the Directorium one at least of which places the festum loci early in the week, and I would refer the reader's attention to such critical passages as relate to Monday in the second week after Easter lit. dom. 3F. ('Feria ii. de festo loci propter vespervas habendas.'), and the third week 3G. ('feria ii. de festo loci.'), and when Canon Cooke's edition is before us there will be a better hope that the doubts and difficulties which beset us in this study may be on the way to be speedily and finally removed.

(C) At the end of the Sanctorale in the late fifteenth century MS. Breviary of Sarum use now at St. John's College, Cambridge (H. 13), we find the full order for the three commemorations themselves provided for use in a church which evidently had the dedication of 'All Hallows' or 'All Saints.'

The three commemorations in the case in point are clearly given:—

1. Commemoratio Omnium Sanctorum.
2. Commemoratio B. Thome Martyris.
3. Commemoratio B. Marie.

Ant. O quam gloriosum est regnum in quo cum Christo gaudent omnes Sancti amicti stolis albis. secuntur Agnum quocunque ierit.

Ps. Dominus regnabit, irascantur (xcviij. p. 170).

Fratres parati sumus mente integra. fide firma virtute robusta. caritate perfecta ad omnem voluntatem anime. conservantes.

Dominica mandata fortiter, in simplicitate innocentiam. in caritate concordiam. in humilitate diligenciam. in administratione vigilantiam. in adiuvandis laborantibus compassionem. in fovendis pauperibus misericordiam. in defendenda veritate constanciam. in discipline seueritate censuram: ne aliquid ad exemplum bonorum sanctorum desit nobis. Hec sunt vestigia que nobis sancti quique reuertentes in patriam reliquerunt: ut eorum semitis inherentes sequamur et gaudia.

V. Magnus Dominus et laudabilis nimis in civitate Dei nostri in monte sancto eius. Ibi requiescunt.

Lectio ii.

Patriam quoque nostram cum illis paradysum computemus, parentes patriarchas iam habere cepimus. Cur non properamus et currimus ut patriam nostrum et parentes videre possimus? Nos ille carorum numerus expectat parentum fratrum filiorum nos frequens. et copiosa turba desiderat, iam de sua incolumitate securi, adhuc de nostra salute solliciti, ad eorum complexum in conspectu venire. quanta et nobis et illis communis leticia erit. qualis celestium voluntas conseruorum societatem expectando quam summa et perpetua felicitas.

V. Ideo accipient regnum decoris. et dyadema speciei de manu Domini.

Lectio iii.

Illic apostolorum chorus gloriosus. illic prophetarum numerus insignis. illic martirum populus innumerabilis obcertantium victoria coronatus. illic clarrissima turba virginum letatur. illic et confessorum fortitudo laudatur. sed et illorum remuneratio censetur. quia precepta Domini seruantes ad celestes thesauros terrena patrimonia transtulerunt ad hos. ut delectetur auida cupiditate properemus, ut cum hijs cito esse et cito ad Christum uenire contingat. cum huius itineris ducem habeamus salutis auctorem. lucis principem, leticie largitorem. Qui vivit et regnat cum Deo Patre omnipotente et Spiritu Sancto per infinita seculorum secula. Amen.

3 R. Concede nobis Domine quesumus ueniam delictorum et intercedentibus sanctis quorum hodie sollempnia celebramus. Talem nobis tribue deuotionem. Ut ad eorum peruenire mereamur societatem.

V. Adiuent nos eorum merita quos propria impediunt scelera, excuset intercessio. excusat quos actio, et qui eis tribuisti celestis palmam triumphi, nobis ueniam non deneges peccati.

Gloria. Talem nobis.

V. Iusti autem in perpetuum.

Circunderunt me gemitus mortis :
dolores inferni circunderunt me.

Hymnus.

In manus tuas, Domine, commendo spiritum meum,
 ut, sicut sine crimine
 Hominem, te credo Deum, Qui precioso sanguine redemisti mundum reum :
 salva, qui formasti eum.

(It will be observed that these three lessons are formed out of one of the longer lessons, the 5th, provided for the feast of the Translation of St. Thomas, 7th July, in the Great Breviary of 1531. The Responsoria are those of the first nocturn for St. Thomas' Day, 29th December. A fuller order for the weekly commemoration of St. Thomas of Canterbury will be given presently from one of the later breviaries.)

[Doubtless some such direction as the rubric of the Great Legenda of 1518—‘legantur tres lectiones ex istis sequentibus per ordinem’—was understood to apply to the foregoing six sets of lessons provided for the weekly commemoration or plenum seruicium de Beata Maria. In the printed Great Breviaries there are likewise six alternative sets, but they are of greater length. In fact the foregoing (i–vi) are only a portion of sets 1–4 of A.D. 1516, 1531. They appear to be drawn mainly from St. Augustine’s Sermones de Sanctis, 18 and 35 = Appendix Sermon. 208.]

(D) In the York Breviary

the Rubrica de Commemorationibus (i. 673–702) prescribes a

Commemoratio de Domina, die sabbati

Commemoratio de S. Willelmo, feria tertia ; et

The rule at York ‘de Apostolis’ was to be a guide for the commemoration de festo loci in aliis ecclesiis (p. 692.)

A General Council, held at York 29 Oct. 1478, prescribed that the two last should be said in Advent, Septuagesima, and Eastertide (p. 692). Three alternative sets of lessons are provided in both cases.

To the foregoing is added in the York Breviary, pp. 702–706, a service

In Commemoratione Omnium Sanctorum.

It is founded upon the York service for All Saints’ day, but is evidently intended for a weekly commemoration to be used where requisite. It differs entirely from the parallel form which we have just given (p. 190) from the St. John’s MS. of Sarum use.

(E) The office provided in the Sarum Breviary III. pp. 377-390, In commemoratione S. Pauli Apostoli, was intended not for a weekly commemoration but for a yearly service, and (like the All Souls' office) owes its name to being in some sort subordinate to, or dependent upon, a great festival on the previous day. However, with curtailment of the mattins and other necessary modifications, it no doubt supplied a weekly service for churches dedicated in honour of St. Paul the Apostle. These (the single dedication apart from St. Peter, and discarding those dedicated in honour of the Breton St. Pol de Leon, Paul Hen of Wales, and Paulinus) are few—St. Paul's Cathedral in London, St. Paul's, Bedford, Malmesbury Abbey Church, Woburn in Bucks, and two or three others were all that were known to Precentor Venables in 1880.

Two saints who held a high place in popular devotion, St. Christopher (25 July) and St. Erasmus (2 June),<sup>1</sup> met with little or no recognition in strict Sarum use, being overshadowed it may be by other saints whose honour occupied those days. But both of them had a mass in Commemoratione in the appendix or supplement of the Sarum Missal (ed. Dickinson), pp. 899*, 903*. A MS. psalter in the British Museum (Bibl. Reg. 2 B. I.) has, after the Litany of the Virgin, the following suffrages.

Henry Bradshaw observed that the rise of the cultus of St. Erasmus, in England, must be dated about 1485-90.

The sixteenth century protestant writers have frequent allusions to such special cultus. 'St. Job for the pox, St. Roch for the pestilence, St. Germain for the ague, St. Apolline for the teethache, St. Gratian for thrift losing, and St. Barbara for gunshot.' Bale's Image of Both Churches, cap. viii. v. 1.—'They teach the people to pray to saints: to St. Luke for the ox, to Job for the pox, to Roche for the pestilence, to Sith for things lost, to Christopher for continual health, to the Queen of Heaven for women with child, to Clement for good beer.' Roger Hutchinson, The Image of God, or Layman's Book, 1550. Works, p. 171-2. As the heathen 'had Esculapius to save them from diseases, so had we St. Roke to supply that room. As they had Mars to help them in warfare, so had we St. George to make us win the field.' Ja. Calfhill Preface against J. Martiall, on the Cross, 1565.—Similarly in the Third Part of the Sermon against Peril of Idolatry in the 2nd Tome of Homilies 1562-3. 'When you hear of our Lady of Walsingham, our Lady of Ipswich, our Lady of Wilsdon, and such others, what is it but an imitation &c. . . Terentius Varro sheweth, that there were 300 Jupiters in his time, there were no fewer Veneres and Diana's: we had no fewer Christophers, Ladies, and Mary Magdalens, and other Saints. . . The Sea and Waters. . . had Gods with the Gentiles, Neptune, &c.: In whose places be come Saint Christopher, Saint Clement, and divers others, and specially our Lady, to whom shipmen sing Ave maris stella. Churches appear to have been dedicated in honour of St. Christopher at Carmenellis, St. Christopher-le-Stocks in London (1462), Lympsham, Pott Shrigley, Willingale Doe, Winfrith Newburgh; and at 'Eweny' (? Redruth), in Cornwall, SS. Rumnon and Christopher. (Borlase, Age of the Saints, p. 68.)

The fresco of St. Christopher at St. John's Church, Winchester, discovered and unfortunately destroyed in 1852, was on the south wall of the nave, not far from the door which is at the western end of that wall, so that this gigantic figure would have impressed itself upon the sight of anyone leaving the church, and would have been to his left hand. It would likewise be the first object visible to anyone entering by the north door, now blocked up. At Stoke Dry, in Rutland, this saint's figure is to the left hand as one leaves the church from the Digby chantry on the south of the chancel. There was a church of St. Christopher at Rheims in the sixth century which was converted into the Abbey of St. Remigius. Dugdale Monast. vi. p. 1098. An altar with his dedication stood in the nave of Lincoln Cathedral. (Maddison's Vicars Choral, pp. 37, 42.) His effigies in mediæval glass are still to be seen in York Minster, and at King's College Chapel, and in wall paintings brought to light from time to time (e.g. at Stoke Dry, Rutland, and at St. John's, Winchester). The very early dated print or block picture of St. Christopher (A.D. 1423) in the Spencer (Rylands) collection will not be forgotten. It is pasted (with a cut of the Annunciation) in the MS. Laus Virginum, in the collection now at Manchester. (See E. Gordon Duff's Early Printed Books, p. 3.) To have seen a St. Christopher was a kind of insurance against accidents for the day; while the cultus of St. Erasmus, who had passed <sup>1</sup> The Feast of St. George the Martyr (23 April) was one of 21 appointed by the Council of Oxford to be kept as a holiday ab operibus minoribus servilibus, in 1222. (See Hardouin, Concilia vii. 117; Coleti Conc. xiii. 1070.) K. Richard I. had defeated Saladin upon that day in 1192. In 1344 the Most Noble Order of St. George (the Garter) was instituted. In 1414 Abp. Chicheley enjoined that St. George's Feast should be kept like the Christmas holiday. Wilkins Conc. iii. 376. St. George's Guild and Feast flourished at Salisbury, 1306-1523.

In the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge in a book of Hours written about A.D. 1500 (MS. 25) there is at p. 268 another form of the suffrage of St. Christopher. After lines 1, 2, 4-6 of the metrical antiphon, 'Gaude martir,' given above, follows

Mr. Maskell has printed two forms of suffrages de Beato rege Henrico, in Monumenta Ritualia, iii. pp. 367–370 (ed. 1882). The former, taken from the larger Sarum horæ (the quartos of 1516, 1520, &c.), is entirely different from that which we print here. The other, a form ‘composed by Pope Sixtus IV.’ (1471–84), and printed from Harl. MS. 5793, has the same Antiphon, ‘Beatus rex H. pauperum,’ &c., but a different ℣., ℞. and Orison.

Maskell gives also (pp. 370–71) a ‘salutatio gloriosi militis Christi, Henrici regis Anglie sexti, cum oratiuncula breui.’ which again is entirely different. K. Henry died 21 May, 1471. May 22nd was the day set apart for his honour, although he was never formally canonized.

A constitution of Henry Chichele, Abp. of Canterbury in 1415, ordered the observance of the feast of St. George 'tanquam patroni et protectoris nationis Anglicani specialis,' and is included in the Canon law of England. (Lyndewood Provinciale ii. pp. 68, 69 ed. Oxon. 1679.)

Preces et Suffragia pro Henrico Rege VII.º

By an easy transition we pass from the commemoration of K. Henry VI. to some prayers on behalf of K. Henry VII. which concern us here in as much as they will be found to throw a little light (though only of a negative character) upon the Sarum Missa capitularis.

We may gather from such passages as the Sarum Manuale (Surtees Soc. vol. 63), p. 74*, and Missale (ed. Burntisland), pp. 859*, 861*, that on ordinary days a missa in capitulo pro defunctis was said before terce, and in fact as a rule immediately after prime (but if some commendatio animarum was required to be said

<sup>2</sup> The initial or mark, which looks like 22, may serve for 'Ricardi' or 'Henrici' (or for 'Edwardi' if occasion arose).

'a toto choro cum nota' then the commendation followed the hour of prime and the capitular or other mass for the Departed came immediately after such 'commendation').

In a MS. which has now come into the possession of the Bishop of Salisbury and is known by the name of 'Miscellanea et Statuta quoad Sarum,'<sup>1</sup> there is among other curious papers a formal undertaking on the part of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury (adapted likewise both for the Abbot and Convent of St. Mary's Abingdon, and for some Austin Priory in the same diocese by a few alternative interlineations). The parties engage themselves to make prayers for the happy and prosperous state of His Majesty K. Henry VII. They grant him, in terms commonly found in letters of fraternity, the benefit of all masses, prayers, fasts, vigils, disciplines, abstinences, indulgences, alms-deeds, labours and other good works which are done in their communities, and they engage (1) during his lifetime to say or sing daily 'cum nota' by some priest of their body at the greater or high altar of their church the following orison :

"Quesumus omnipotens et misericors Deus, vt rex et fundator noster Henricus septimus, qui tua miseracione," &c., and the Secret "Munera quesumus, Domine, oblata sanctifica," &c., and Postcommunio "Hec quesumus, Domine, salutaris," &c., as in the alternative Mass for K. Henry VIII in the Sarum Missals of 1512, 1520. ed. Burntisland 786* n.<sup>2</sup>

(2) 'Cum vero ab hac luce migraueris, deinde in qualibet principali missa ad maius, siue summum, altare Ecclesie cathedralis (siue prioratus, vel monasterij) predict', per aliquem nostrorum vel successorum nostrorum, aut alium sacerdotem (confratrem, s. commonachum confratrem), vel ministrum quemcunque celebranda, Celebrans ipse, quicunque pro tempore fuerit, singulis diebus imperpetuum pro salute anime uestre solemmniter et cum nota leget et dicet oracionem sequentem, viz., "Inclina, Domine, aurem tuam," &c., vnacum hoc secreto "Animam famuli tui Regis Henrici septimi fundatoris nostri ab omnibus vicijs," &c. Et cum hac postcommunione "Annue nobis, Domine, ut anima," &c. (as in Missale Sarum pp. 876*, 877*, 'pro trigintalibus').

Or. Quesumus, Omnipotens et misericors Deus, ut famulus.

Postcomm. Hec, Domine, quesumus salutaris sacramenti.

Deinde Sacerdos celebrans dicet, et Chorus, vt moris est, respondebit, "Et ne nos," &c., "Sed libera," &c. Exurgat Deus, &c.,/ Domine, saluum fac Regem, &c. Mitte ei, [lf. 58<sup>b</sup>. &c. Esto ei, &c. Nichil proficiat, &c. Dñe, fiat, &c. Dñe, exaudi, &c. Dñs vobiscum, &c. Oremus. Da quesumus, &c. (the same prayer as that for the King in the Preces in prostratione in Missale Sarum p. 634, but with an inserted clause "et de hostibus triumphum, vt bonis," &c.)

(4) Cum vero ab hac luce migrauerit, extunc in omni supradicta missa capitulari per nos (vel, &c.) et ministrum quemcunque ad aliquod altare in ecclesia Cathedrali (monasterio s. prioratu) predict' celebranda statim post fractionem hostie, &c. Celebrans/ ipse cum sibi assistentibus, &c. singulis [lf. 58<sup>b</sup>. diebus imperpetuum leget et dicet psalmos et suffragia sequent', viz.

Ps. Voce mea (cxli.) Et ps. De profundis (cxxxix.) cum V. Gloria, &c. (Kyrie, Pater, and Ave, as above, but followed by) Requiem, &c. A porta, &c. Credo videre, &c. Dñe, exaudi. Dñs vobiscum. Oremus. Adiuvaa nos, Deus salutaris noster, et beatissime, &c. The prayer pro amico defuncto in the Sarum Missale p. 874*.

The phrases "ad aliquod altare Ecclesie cathedralis," &c., and "ad aliquod altare in Ecclesia cathedrali," &c., occurring in the above extract with reference to the missa capitularis, may suffice to dispose finally of the notion, which on other and independent grounds has been losing its prestige, that this mass was said in the Chapter House at Salisbury or elsewhere.<sup>1</sup> 'In capitulo' or 'capitularis' as applied to the mass in the cathedral church after prime, had only by accident any connotation of locality. It was as independent of the unity of place as the papal 'conclave,' or the 'court' of K. Charles I. There is, so far as I am aware, no evidence that our Chapter houses were ever used for the celebration of mass, and it appears that the 'missa in capitulo' at Salisbury was said sometimes at one altar, sometimes at another, only not at the high altar.<sup>1</sup> It seems by no means improbable that the name of this mass is of earlier date than the building of our Chapter Houses.<sup>2</sup> The Chapter Mass was, as a general rule, a Requiem Mass said in commemoration of the Departed. It followed the Chapter Office after Prime (and after the 'Commemoratio Animarum' when that was recited), and it preceded the High Mass. Sometimes when the proper mass of a Sunday or a Vigil could not be said as the principal mass of the day, <sup>1</sup> Even this exception, if we may trust the account of the 'Rites of Durham' as written down in 1593, was, as we shall see presently, no exception at Durham.

'post Primam, ante missam capituli pro defunctis' Brev. I. xlviii.

The commendatio animarum is said on all ordinary ferias in Lent 'statim post Primam ante missam capitularem. . . nisi in crastino duplicis festi.' Brev. I. dlxxxix. Cf. 'Nulla feria in Paschali tempore dicitur missa capitularis pro defunctis, nisi &c. Missal 860*. 'Missa ferialis in capitulo pro defunctis,' ante Tertiam dicitur missa in capitulo pro fidelibus defunctis cum diacono et subdiacono albis cum amictibus indutis tantum' Missale 859*—861*. But 'quando corpus adest presens,' and on Bishops' anniversaries, 'tunc ad altare authenticum (the high altar) aliquando ad alia altaria, juxta quae corpora eorum requiescunt humata.' The following also are from the Breviary 'Vigilie mortuorum quotidie, cum missa in crastino in capitulo. . . et in ipsa iii. feria (ante Pascha) fiant Vigilie mortuorum cum ix lec. in conuentu cum missa in crastino.' When a Canon dies it is the rule 'xxx dierum in conuentu obsequium fieri' and each of his brethren to say 'xxx psalteria separatim' I. xlv. On Christmas Eve, when it falls on Sunday, 'missa dominicalis in capitulo post Primam vel Tertiam et ante processionem dicatur. Et missa de Vigilia dicatur post sextam in choro ad autenticum altare.' I. clxiv. Under certain circumstances 'missa dominicalis Adorate in aliquo festo ix. lectionum in Capitulo cantetur,' and under certain others both Omnis terra and Adorate 'in Capitulo cantentur.' I. ccclxii.

When Corpus Christi falls on St. John Bapt. Day the procession at 2nd vespers goes to St. John's altar 'si habeatur,' and on the Sunday following St. John's mass is 'in capitulo.' I. mxxvi, mxxxii. In the rubric of the Missa pro Defunctis II. 526, Missale 865* we have the phrase 'quando dicitur missa ferialiter in capitulo, vel alibi,' which certainly if it stood alone would suggest the idea of place.

In the Proprium Sanctorum we find the rule that the mass of St. Andrew's Octave is to be said 'in capitulo' when it occurs on Saturday; and likewise of St. Laurence's Octave when on a Sunday. III. 39, 708. ('In capitulo' occurs of a service which was held in the Chapter House in III. p. 986.) Missa in Capitulo is found likewise several times in the Pie of two commemorations, and exceedingly frequently in that of three. See above pp. 106, 150, 119, 120, 122, 124.

<sup>2</sup> The Chapter House at Lincoln is said to have been finished about 1250, that of Salisbury in 1280, that of Wells in 1300. The Lincoln statute may be dated perhaps as early as 1214 or 1236.

provision was made that the displaced mass should be said for 'missa in capitulo,' on the same or some other convenient day. We find instances also of a Vigil mass said 'in Chapter.'

At St. Paul's, the Chapter mass was said by one of the two minor canons, or Priest Vicars, who were called cardinals.

At Lincoln it was the duty of the vicars (as well no doubt as of the canons) to attend it, as a general rule, and it counted for them as equivalent to one of the little Hours in 1309. The celebrant at Lincoln (cir. 1267) was a canon (appointed for that occasion by the precentor) and he was attended by deacon and subdeacon 'revested,' at least when celebrating for the anniversary of a deceased canon, or the like. (Kings and Bishops of Lincoln alone had their anniversary mass at the high altar.) The old thirteenth century statute at Lincoln laid down as part of the duty of the Treasurer that he should provide "ad missam in capitulo duos cereos." (Black Book, p. 289.) When the precise and lawyer-like Bp. W. Alnwick was revising this passage in 1440 in hopes of improving the Lincoln Statutes in point of perspicuity, he altered the words 'in capitulo' into 'capitularem.' This circumstance is worth noting, because it establishes beyond dispute the identity of 'missa capitularis' with 'missa in capitulo.'

At Durham, we are told, the 'Chapter mass' was celebrated at the high altar, at 9 o'clock, when the business in the Chapter house was done, and special mention was made of benefactors in the 'Memento.' (Rites of Durham, p. 82.)

At Exeter, in 1337 (Ordinale, fo. 8<sup>b</sup>) two choristers were required to attend the 'missa in capitulo.' A further regulation must be quoted from the same source (fo. 18<sup>b</sup>). After chapter business, and the correctiones capitulares :—

'Et si debeat dici missa aliqua de vigilia, vel alias dominicalis vel de sanctis, in capitulo, i[d est] post capitulum ante terciam assignentur aliqui de quolibet gradu, ita quod ad minus sint octo, exceptis ministris indutis, qui [e]idem intersint misse, ne inhoneste, vt aliquociens contingit, missa dicatur capitularis: quia ipsa ita est ordinaria sicut et magna, missa.'

Whether we put a comma after 'terciam' or not, it is plain that 'in capitulo' was considered to need a gloss, 'post capitulum, ante terciam,' as being in itself ambiguous. And Bp. J. de Grandisson at Exeter, like Bp. Alnwick a century later at Lincoln, inclines to the word 'capitularis.'

In the last generation several students of the rite of Sarum supposed that the capitular mass was celebrated in the Chapter-House: e.g. C. Seager Brev. Sar. (1843) p. xlvi. commenting on Pr. p. 1., J. D. Chambers Divine Worship (1877) p. 86, and A. H. Pearson Sarum Missal in English in the first edition (1868), pp. xxviii, xxix, 571, 575 &c. However, in the more recent edition of his Missal (1884, pp. xix, xx) Mr. Pearson expressed a modified opinion.

Mr. F. H. Dickinson, in the preface to Missale ad usum Sarum, drafted in 1873 and published in 1883, pp. vii, viii. note n., calls the Missa in capitulo 'a great puzzle.' He admits that we are tempted to translate it "in the Chapter-house," but he adds that, for certain reasons, it is 'almost impossible' that it should have been said in that building. He refers most pertinently to a short chronicle published by Dr. Sparrow Simpson for the Camden Society in 1880, in which is mentioned, p. 56, that in 1339 two Altars, north and south of the High Altar, were consecrated along with it, and that they 'were called Capitularia. It seems obvious that these were placed there with a view to the celebration of the Missa Capitularis.' As to the fundamental question, the origin and history of the term capitulum itself, Mr. Dickinson inclined to that derivation 'which connects it with the French word "Chevet,"—la partie de l'Église qui est derrière le maître autel, et qui est plus élevée que le reste—and it is possible that the Capitulum was the Eastern part of the Presbytery, and the Missa in Capitulo said behind the High Altar at another Altar.'

While accepting that locality as the most probable and most suitable for this mass, I rather think that the term 'in capitulo' in this case does not connote place at all, or only accidentally, but that it means the mass which is said while the canons and others are assembled in their capitular character. And I would give 'capitulum' as regards the mass much the same sense as 'convēntus' has with respect to certain choral offices: observing further that, while we may speak of the one as 'choral,' although it is sung extra chorum, or at some distance from the structural choir, so we may call the mass in question 'capitular,' or say that it was 'sung in chapter,' although it was celebrated anywhere but in the Chapter House. (See above p. 165.)

The Bishops' Council ('Decanus et Capitulum matricis ecclesiae') in Cathedrals of the 'Old Foundation' had held their meetings, capitulariter congregati, et capitulum facientes, as the phrase runs, for many years before they had a regular Domus Capitularis, specially constructed for those meetings, and called after their own body 'Capitulum.' When Chapter Houses at length grew up, the business meetings were transferred to them along with such conventual offices as the reading of the obit-book, the Martilogium, and Collationes Patrum, and the Maundy washing. But the Capitular mass lingered at the Altar in some chapel or dignified but secluded part of the church where there was accommodation for the ritual of a mass with deacon and subdeacon, and for the dignitaries and other members of the Cathedral staff who congregated to it, and where at the same time its semi-private character, as a gathering of the family of confratres et concanonici, cum ceteris ministris ecclesie cathedralis, could be well secured and maintained. Thus (I would, with some diffidence, suggest) it may have come about that a missa in capitulo was said at some distance from the domus capitularis, as a 'Vestry-meeting' is often held in some room quite distinct from the 'Revestry' of the parish church, or as a sitting of the 'Queen's Bench' division of the Judicature takes place where the Sovereign did not repose while awaiting Coronation.

(iii.) Like the Sarum Breviary of 1531 the portiforium of 1556 has a form (immediately before the Dedication Offices).

In commemoratione S. Cedde episcopi.

It gives the following lessons which are nearly identical with those of the 1st nocturn of the festival (2 March):—

Lectio i. Temporibus igitur Oswaldi . . . faceret episcopum. (iii. p. 196.)

Lectio ii. Cum adhuc Wilfridus . . . ordinatus episcopus. (ibid.)

Lectio iii. Consecratus igitur in episcopum Cedda . . . unde ordinandus discesserat rediit. (iii. pp. 196, 197.)

This service is worked out in 1556 more fully, on the whole, than in 1531. But the antiphone in ferialibus diebus are not noticed.

(iv.) The form provided in 1556, in the Sarum portiforium,
In commemoratione S. Etheldrede virginis
non martyris Eliensis diocesis, is identical with that which we have printed in extenso (from a portiforium of 1525-6) as an appendix to the Psalterium of the Sarum Breviary, pp. 557-8. It runs thus:—

Oratio. Deus qui eximie castitatis.

Cetera Unius Virginis non martyris.

Lectio ii. Succurre domina: succurre . . . gratulentur adeptos. (leg. 'gaudeamus' li. 10, pro 'gaudemus'.)

- Canterbury. The Holy Trinity, but commonly called 'Christ Church,'<sup>1</sup> and formally 'the cathedral and metropolitan church of Christ, Canterbury.' (Ded. 4 May. Saxon Chron. Arundel MS. 155. The crypt, or lady chapel, 16 Aug.) For commem. masses in 1285, see above, p. 174.
- Carlisle. St. Mary's Priory. The dean and chapter incorporated by K. Hen. VIII. under the title of the D. and C. of the Cathedral Church of the Holy Undivided Trinity.
- Cashel. St. Patrick. (His commem. ordered in 1348.) The older Cathedral is in ruins. In 1749, when the old cathedral was abandoned and the see transferred to the church of St. John Baptist, Cashel, it was directed that the new cathedral should be designated 'the cathedral and parochial church of St. Patrick's Rock and St. John Baptist Cashell.'
- Chester. The cathedral church of the Mercian bishopric, when temporarily settled at Chester, was dedicated in honour of St. John Baptist. In 1541 a new see was founded in the

<sup>1</sup> All older mediæval dedications popularly called 'Christ Church' are really dedications to the Holy Trinity: as for instance Christ Church King's Court at York, Norwich and Waterford cathedrals, Christ Church, Dublin, &c. [T. M. F.]

- Benedictine monastic church of St. Werburg [and Oswald]. And on 4 Aug. 1541 K. Hen. VIII. incorporated the Dean and Chapter of the Cath. Church of Christ and B. Mary, V. (Dugd. Monast. ii. 366, 396.)
- Chichester. (The former cathedral at Selsey was dedicated to St. Peter, as is the antient parish church there.) Pre-Reformation: The Holy Trinity. Unchanged, and now, formally, 'the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, Chichester.' (Never termed 'Christ Church.') Ded. 12 Sept. 1199. (Owen, Sanctorale Cath.)
- Clogher. St. Macartin.
- Clonfert. St. Brendan. (Commem. of St. Patrick.) 'The cathedral church of St. Brandon.' In 1745 W. Crome was appointed dean 'of the cathedral church of Kevin dioc. Clonfert.' Irish Patent Rolls.
- Clonmacnoise. St. Kieran. In ruins. In 1741 Patent of Dr. J. Owens, dean of 'St. Kiarans.'
- Cloyne. St. Colman. (Commem. of St. Patrick.)
- Connor. (Old dedication not known.) St. Saviour's parish church, Lisburn, consecrated in 1813. The old cathedral is destroyed. (Chapter constituted in 1609. K. James I.) In 1709, Patent of Dr. Owen Lloyd, dean 'of our Holy Saviour in Connor.'
- Cork. St. Finbar. (Commem. of St. Patrick.) New cathedral, 1870.
- [Coventry. Pre-Reformation, St. Mary, St. Peter and St. Osburg: con-cathedral church with Lichfield. Now destroyed.]
- Cumbræ. Collegiate Church of the Holy Spirit, serving as a cathedral for the limited diocese of Argyll and the Isles. It was constituted the cathedral of the Isles (not, however, of Argyll) by bishop Mackarness.
- Derry. St. Columb. The present building does not stand on the site of the ancient cathedral.
- Dornoch. The cathedral church of the diocese of Caithness, St. Mary's. Mainly rebuilt in the early part of this century and used as the presbyterian parish church.
- Down. Holy Trinity. The old church A.D. 440; a college of Secular Canons. Here St. Patrick was buried, and subsequently it was dedicated as St. Patrick's Benedictine Priory. K. James I. changed the dedication from 'St. Patrick' to 'the Holy Trinity.' (Lewis, Top. Dict. Ireland.) Some consider that this was a return to the earliest dedication. Re-built and re-consecrated 1826.
- Dromore. Christ the Redeemer. The old church A.D. 500. Re-built by Jeremy Taylor, after the Rebellion, and consecrated 1661. Formally constituted or recognised as the - cathedral of Dromore, 21 Geo. II. Patent of Dean Singe, 1634, 'of the cathedral of Christ the Redeemer de Dromore.'

- Dublin (2) St. Patrick's. At first a parish church, made a collegiate church, re-built and consecrated 1191. Made a cathedral 1213. Restored 1865.
- Dunblane. St. Blaas (the choir hitherto used as the presbyterian parish church; but quite recently the entire building has been roofed over and is in use).
- Dunkeld. St. Columba (partly ruined, the choir used as the presbyterian parish church).
- Durham. Pre-Reformation, St. Cuthbert and St. Mary. K. Henry VIII., 4 May, 1541, incorporated 'the dean and chapter of Durham, of the cathedral church of Christ and blessed Mary the Virgin.'
- Edinburgh. Modern cathedral church of St. Mary.
The old collegiate church of St. Giles. Raised to cathedral rank by K. Charles I., 29 Sept. 1633. It so continued till the 'abolition of prelacy' in Scotland, when it was divided into three separate parish churches (in choir, south transept, nave). Restored 15 years ago, and now in use as one presbyterian parish church.
- Elgin. Holy Trinity cathedral church of the diocese of Moray (in ruins).
- Elphin. B.V. Mary.
- Ely. Pre-Reformation monastic church of St. Peter and St. Etheldreda.<sup>1</sup> K. Henry VIII., 10 Sept. 1541, erected the late monastery into a 'cathedral church of the Holy and Undivided Trinity of Ely.' Dugd. Monast. i. pp. 483, 469. (Commem. of S. Etheldreda V., in portiforio Sarum, 1509, &c.) Ded. 17 Sept. 1252.
- Emly. St. Aelbeus, Alibeus, or Elibeus, teacher of St. David of Wales. (Commem. of St. Patrick.) Taken down after the disestablishment.
- Enachdune, see Annagdown.
- Eton College. Our Lady. Also commem. of St. Hugh, Bp. (Bp. Longland's Visitation 1527.)
- Exeter. St. Peter. 'eccl. cath. beati Petri Exon.' Still <sup>1</sup> Ely had been dedicated in Dunstan's time on Feb. 2nd or 3rd, the 'titulus B. Petri' placed 'in capite ecclesie,' and the 'memoria' of the B. Virgin to the south. In still earlier times the church was St. Peter's, and contained an altar of St. Etheldreda and her relicks. Liber Eliensis ii, capp. 52, 5, 4.

I. COLLEGE OF ST. MARY WINTON, BY WINCHESTER.

(i.) The Benefactors.

(1.) The author of the Defensorium, probably himself a Wykehamist, has mentioned (cap. 3, p. 6) the custom of the clerks of the Colleges of Winton and Oxford, and the limits of their obligation to observe Sarum rule.

(a.) Fifteen years ago Dr. Westcott, now Bishop of Durham, showed me in the Cathedral Library at Peterborough a folio Sarum Missal, printed by Rembolt, 21 Jan. 1513, and containing a MS. insertion on vellum to fit the book (which is printed on paper) for use in some society which had at least a 'general' obligation to observe the Sarum rites. More recently the statutes of Winchester College have been printed for the first time in Mr. Kirby's Annals of Winchester College (1892), and while these pages have been passing through the press it has occurred to me that the book now at Peterborough must have belonged originally to one of William of Wykeham's Colleges. The Christian names of the persons commemorated prove this unmistakably, when compared with those mentioned in the Statutes (rubrica xxix.) in Kirby's Annals pp. 503-5. The Winchester Statutes were drawn up in 1394, or earlier, and were subscribed by the society in the Chapel 11 Sept. 1400.

In rubric xxix. the Founder gave his rules de modo dicendi missas, matutinas, et alias horas canonicas in capella Collegii memorati, et de ordine standi in choro capelle predictæ.

These services were to be executed, by the fellows in priest's order and by other chaplains and conducts,<sup>1</sup> 'cum cantu et nota . . .

<sup>1</sup> The term 'conduct' for a stipendiary chaplain, removable with due notice, 'clericus conducticius' as distinguished from 'socius perpetuus,' long survived at Eton and King's College, Cambridge. The boys were allowed to sing and perform matins and other divine service according to the custom of Sarum on the feast of Holy Innocents or Childermas.

secundum usum et consuetudinem ecclesie Cathedralis Sarum.' Mattins on ordinary days were to be sung between 4 and 5 o'clock. After mattins and the service of prime appointed for the day, seven masses de certo<sup>1</sup> were to be celebrated in college chapel every day throughout the year, Good Friday alone excepted.

Mass i. at the high altar. De sancta Maria, according to the Sarum rules, with 5 collects, viz.

a. The orison proper to the Lady Mass. b. The prayer Rege, quaesumus, Domine famulum tuum W., &c. (as in Missale Sarum p. 816,* pro episcopo) for the Founder during his lifetime, and afterwards for his successor in the see of Winton for the time being. On Saturdays, and on other occasions when the Mass of the Blessed Virgin would come naturally as the mass of the day—see No. iii, below—the first mass and its collect shall be either Salus populi, or pro Pace, or else de Cruce, as in the Missal pp. 741*, 783*, 748*, or for any Saint that occurred for celebration on the day in question. c. The prayer Quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, for the healthful state of the King, see Missal, p. 785*. d. Either for the estate of the Church throughout the world ('pro statu uniuersalis ecclesie'), or pro Pace; and lastly, e. The prayer Fidelium Deus, for the Founder's parents and all faithful souls, see Missal, p. 879*. After W. of Wykeham's death (which took place 27 Sep. 1404) c and d were to share the third place in turn, and the fourth place was to be occupied regularly by the prayer Deus qui inter apostolicos (see Missal p. 870*, pro episcopis defunctis) for the Founder's soul.<sup>2</sup>

a. for the Bishop-Founder's soul, Deus qui inter apostolicos, as above. b. the prayer Inclina Domine—and c. the prayer Fidelium Deus, Missal pp. 876*, 879*. This was the office Requiem, for the souls of K. Edward III., Q. Philippa of Hainault, their son Edward the Black Prince, of Aquitaine and Wales, K. Richard II. and Q. Anne of Bohemia, also for the Founder himself, his parents John and Sibilla Longe, and for Ralph de Sutton, Knt., John de Scures, Knt., Thomas de Foxle, Andrew Gerveys, John Wodelok, and other benefactors of the College and for all faithful souls.

Mass iii. at the high altar. De die. (This is expressly called the High Mass in the corresponding chapter of the Eton Statutes which K. Henry VI. drafted on the Winchester lines.) It was, of course, the Sarum mass for the day.

Mass iv. For the soul of Sir Ralph de Sutton, Knt. with 3 collects, viz. a. Deus cui soli. b. Inclina, Domine, and c. Fidelium Deus. Sarum Missal, pp. 873*, 876*, 879*.

Mass v. For the souls of Sir J. Scures, Knt., T. Foxle, Andrew Gerveys, and J. Wodelok, with 3 collects as aforesaid.

Masses vi, vii. Two masses pro Fundatore, with the collect Rege quaesumus, as in Mass i. during his lifetime, and after his decease with the 3 collects a. Deus qui inter apostolicos, b. Inclina Domine, and c. Fidelium Deus.<sup>1</sup>

The same collects were to be recited also for the Royal personages and benefactors by priests on the days when they were not engaged as celebrants in their course.

The list of persons commemorated is remarkable, and even touching. Besides honouring his parents (his yeoman father and his 'gentle' mother), the Founder shows his gratitude to the memory of K. Edward, who had appointed him his chaplain, had given him his first preferment in 1349, and had employed him as a surveyor at Windsor. Thomas Foxley had been constable of Windsor Castle (quod 'fecit Wykeham' as he oracularly phrased it) and died (probably of the plague there) in 1361. Richard II. and his Queen had both been living when Wykeham drew up his statutes, but died respectively in Feb. 1400, and in 1394, before these regulations were subscribed by the senior members of the new foundation. Ralph de Sutton was presumably (as Mr. G. H. Moberly observes) Wykeham's earliest patron at his country home in Hampshire. John de Scures had given him his schooling at Winchester Priory School, and then about 1339 had employed him to write, in his fair clerkly hand,<sup>2</sup> at Winchester Castle. The two other names, Andrew Jervis and John Woodlock, are not known to us with any certainty; but I observe that there was a boy named John Gerveys of Fareham admitted a scholar of Winchester College in 1437. Wykeham leaves 100*l.* in his will to a married cousin ('consanguinee') Alice Wodelok, and one William Wodelok of Wherwell entered College in 1472. Wykeham had bequeathed 20 marcs to the abbess and convent of that place. No doubt there was some feeling of affectionate gratitude, which prompted this recognition of a personal regard, in these as in the other commemorations for which he made provision.

as with some aged donor and benefactor, in whom (as Dean Mansel pathetically described such a case in his Phrontisterion)

And the pent-up tide of bounty forced its passage through the heart,”

And who,

“Severed from the bonds of kindred, taught his lonely heart to school
By his Father’s chastening kindness, or his Church’s sterner rule.”

But yet, no doubt, Wykeham had something of a kindred feeling, when he began in a ripe old age to realize at last the deliberate design, so often thwarted, although never laid aside; and in some measure it was true of the great and noble Bishop of Winchester also, that

In his age’s desolation, fondly turned the childless man.”

One by one the friends and patrons of his youth had passed away; but they could not leave him altogether comfortless, for he could leave a name ‘better than of sons and daughters,’ and in the faith and fear of One, who should ‘see His seed’ and should ‘prolong His days,’ Wykeham beheld a happy and blessed consummation of his work.

Through the kindness of Dr. Stephen Phillips, precentor of Peterborough, I have now before me a photograph of the vellum leaves which, as I have before mentioned, are inserted in the Sarum Missal formerly in use in Winchester College Chapel.<sup>1</sup>

At the top of the first leaf of the open page, 4 lines are ruled and left blank for the insertion of some prayer of which only the initial, which I take to be an N, is written. Then follows the collect Inclina, Domine, aurem tuam, the Secreta Animam famuli tui Henrici septimi regis nostri ab omnibus vicijis, and the Post-communio Annue nobis, written at length for the soul of the late King at the date when the missal was new (cir. 1513–20) as in the ordinary Sarum trental in the Missale (ed. Dickinson, pp. 876*, 877*), followed by the Psalms Voce mea ad Dominum clamavi: voce mea ad Dominum deprecatus sum<sup>2</sup> (cxlj.) Gloria Patri and De profundis (cxxix.), the latter alone being too familiar to need copying for the celebrant in extenso, likewise with Gloria Patri, Kyryeleyson &c. Pater noster, Ave Maria, Et ne nos, Requiem eternam, A porta, Credo videre, Domine exaudi, &c.

<sup>1</sup> The mention of four Winchester benefactors including A. Jervis and J. Wodelock (as well as the absence of the commemoration of John Bokyngham, Bp. of Lincoln) shows that the book belonged not to New College, Oxford, but to the sister, or shall we say nursing mother, college of St. Mary, Winton, ‘prope Winton.’ See Moberly’s Life of Wykeham, ed. 1, p. 208.

Oremus. Adiuua nos, Deus salutaris, &c. (the collect pro Amico defuncto in the Missal. p. 874*, adapted here for K. Henry VII.)

The opposite page we must give in full, as it stands, merely premising that nothing is here said of masses i.-iii. because they were respectively de Beata Maria Virgine (as a general rule),<sup>1</sup> de Requiem, and de Die (as we have said above):—

<sup>2</sup> William of Wykeham, founder of Winchester and New College, born in 1324. Bp. of Winchester, elect. 24 Oct. 1366, but cons. 10 Oct. 1367. Chancellor of England: resigned, 1371; again Chancellor under K. Richard II. 1377: again resigned 1391. Died 27 Sept. 1404.

<sup>3</sup> Edward III., King of England, &c., who employed W. of Wykeham as clerk of the works at Windsor Castle, made him his chaplain, and presented him to the rectory of Irstead, in Norfolk, in 1349, and Pulham, Norfolk, 1357. Was crowned 1 (al. 2) Feb. 1326-7. Died 21 June, 1377.

<sup>5</sup> Edward the Black Prince, born 1330. Prince of Aquitaine and Wales. Fought at Creci, 26 Aug. 1346; Poitiers, 19 Sep. 1356. Died 8 June, 1376. Wykeham appears to have had no opportunity for becoming intimate with him. Life, by G. H. Moberly, p. 70.

<sup>10</sup> Sir Ralph de Sutton, probably of the family of Sutton Scotney, who had endowed Southwick priory near Wickham, was doubtless the Bishop's earliest benefactor. Cf. Life of W. of Wykeham, by G. H. Moberly (ed. 1887) pp. 5, 6.

<sup>11</sup> Sir John de Scures, sheriff of Hants, lord of the manor of Wickham, put W. of Wykeham to school with his own sons to learn French and grammar at the high school, or great grammar school of St. Swithun's priory, Winchester, west of the Cathedral close. Sir John made him his secretary at Winchester Castle, where Bp. Edingdon presented him (æt. 22-23) to K. Edward, in Oct. 1347, after the fall of Calais.

<sup>15</sup> Michael Cleve (seventh Warden of Winchester, 1487-1501) was probably the last Warden deceased before this list was made. He was one of the benefactors of the college. He was a native of Oxford, and became fellow of New College. His obit was kept on Oct. 9th, for which a payment of 3*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* appears in the accounts printed by Mr. Kirby (Annals of Winchester, p. 265). Item 'for a mass called septima missa, 1*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.*' He endowed his own obit (with 146*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*), and fixed the day as soon as he was elected Warden, and attended its rehearsal annually, receiving his allowance of 20*d.* as Warden for being present. He bequeathed a great quantity of plate to the College, and the great bell. (ibid. p. 224.)

<sup>16</sup> Robert Thurbern, a poor scholar of Winchester, fed at Wykeham's table before the college was founded, was admitted fellow of New College, Oxford, 1388. He became Warden of Winchester, 1413-1450, and was famous for his hospitality and his loyalty to the cause of the Society. He gave about ninety acres of land and wood to the college, providing that his obit should be observed in a chapel which he designed on the site of the belfry. This chantry was built thirty years after his decease, which occurred 30 Oct. 1450. A crimson velvet chasuble, which he gave among other vestments to the college, was preserved till 1770, when it was given to the churchwardens of Wyke, to make an altar cloth. In Warden Thurbern's time K. Henry VI. was entertained in college while residing hard by, at Wolvesey, for the parliament in 1449, and framing the constitution for his college at Eton. When the Warden died, the college was much in his debt. (ibid. pp. 183, 194, 209.)

<sup>17</sup> Richard Pittleworth is mentioned by Mr. Kirby as a specialis amicus of Winchester College. More than once he turned a large loan into a gift to the Society. He was Secretary to Cardinal Beaufort, and a friend or kinsman of Warden Thurbern. Their names are united in the list of obits printed by Kirby: "Oct. 29, Warden Thurbern and Richard Pittleworth, 4*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*" This justifies me in identifying these benefactors with the 'Roberti' and 'Ricardi' associated at the end of the list. See Annals, pp. 209, 265.

It will be observed that the eighth mass is additional to those prescribed in the statutes (rubr. xxix). It commemorates two benefactors who died about fifty years after the statutes were completed. The Founder, who had prescribed that the celebrants should make the special memorials already commemorated "in eorum memento infra canonem missarum huiusmodi," states that he has had the names of the benefactors and other person to be commemorated entered on a list,—"defunctorum predictorum, ac aliorum nostri et dicti Collegii benefactorum . . . nomina in quadam tabula recitari fecimus plenius et conscribi." Annals, p. 505.

(ii.) Liturgical Colours.

In cap. 41 of the Defensorium (p. 15) its author speaks of regulations de diuersitate vestimentorum as concerning clerks of Salisbury and those who were bound by oath to observe Sarum ceremonies.

The meagre rubric de coloribus, &c., as printed in Missale Sarum pp. 582, 583 is well known; and Dr. Wickham Legg has illustrated it from the manuscripts. It may be interesting to give here what information we can gather as to the practical use of liturgical colours from the Winchester College inventory of 1525 as given by Mr. Kirby (Annals of Winchester Coll., pp. 230-234).

(2.) ST. KATHARINE'S BY THE TOWER.

In cap. 6 of the Defensorium (p. 7) reference is made to the Royal Colleges of Windsor, St. Stephen's, Westminster, and St. Katharine's by the Tower.

The last of these has become St. Katharine's Hospital, Regent's Park, having been removed in 1825 to make place for St. Katharine Docks. It was founded by Q. Matilda, wife of K. Stephen, in 1148, and re-founded by Q. Eleanor, wife of K. Henry III., about 1272, for a Master or Warden, three Brethren, three Sisters, ten Bedeswomen and six Poor Scholars, to be nominated by successive Queens of England. Statutes given to St. Katharine's Hospital by Q. Philippa have been printed by Dr. Ducarel in his History of that foundation, 4to. 1782 (Bibliotheca Topograph. Britannica No. 1), and an account of the Society has been given by J. Bowyer Nichols, 1824, and by F. Simcox Lea, 1878.

In the 4th volume of the Reliquary (New Series), July, 1891, an Inventory of the Vestry of St. Katharine's by the Tower, 1546, has been printed, with notes by Mr. W. H. St. John Hope.

(3.) ST. MARTIN LE GRAND.

There is in the same paper an Inventory of the Plate and Ornaments of another house mentioned by Clement Maydeston Defens. Direct. (cap. 60, p. 22), viz. 'the late Colledge of Saint Merten le grande in London,' 12 Feb. 1552.

(4.) ST. STEPHEN'S, WESTMINSTER.

The College of St. Stephen's, Westminster, is said to have been erected in the Royal Palace of William Rufus, by K. Stephen, and rebuilt by K. Edward I. 1292-5. It was soon destroyed by fire, but built anew by K. Edward III. 1330-48, for a Dean, twelve secular Canons, twelve Vicars, besides other ministers. The last Dean was appointed about 1526 and died in 1549, shortly after the college had surrendered to K. Edward VI. Hither in 1547 the House of Commons migrated from the Chapter-house at Westminster Abbey, where they had previously been allowed a home. John Alcock (Bp. of Rochester and Worcester), Master of the Rolls, was Dean here in 1471, and was succeeded by Peter Courtenay, who became Bp. of Exeter in 1478. In the preceding century Abbot N. Litlington had a contest with the college on the question of jurisdiction. In 1394 K. Richard II. gave an award more favourable to the college than the decision which had been procured in the Court of Rome, but still allowing the Abbots of Westminster to instal the Deans of St. Stephen's. The last Dean of the free Collegiate Chapel of St. Stephen's was John Chambre, founder of the Royal College of Physicians. He was a Canon of the sister college of St. George's, Windsor, of which we have next to speak.

(5.) ST. GEORGE'S AND ST. EDWARD'S, WINDSOR.

The Royal Free Chapel of the Blessed Virgin, St. George and St. Edward the Confessor, Windsor ('de Vento morbido' in the latinity of the Defensorium, cap. 7), is a twin foundation with that of St. Stephen's, and differs from it only in respect of the knights who are included in the society. As these exactly doubled the number of the persons, K. Edward provided double endowments for Windsor. The college consists of five (formerly thirteen) secular canons, of whom one is to be Warden or Dean, four (formerly thirteen) priest vicars or minor canons, twelve (formerly four) clerks, and twenty-four (formerly six) choristers, and eighteen (formerly twenty-six) poor knights. The present Dean (as a Canon) is Registrar of the 'Order of St. George.' Two canons hold the offices of Precentor and Treasurer. A 'Deacon' and a 'Subdeacon' are among the Vicars (or the Clerks). This College of Canons, Priests, Clerks, and poor knights ('ad inopiam vergencium') has Statutes given by William de Edington, Bp. of Winchester, under licence of Clement VI., dated at Avignon 30 Nov. 1350, with the assent of Robert Wyvil, Bp. of Salisbury, and his Chapter (for Windsor was then "Saresbirien dioc") 30 Nov. 1352. The Statutes consist of fifty-four chapters or rubrics, which are too long to quote here in extenso, but by the kind courtesy of Canon Dalton (who is editing the Windsor statutes for the Dean and Chapter) I am enabled to give the following extracts which serve to illustrate certain points in Maydeston's tracts, or are in some other respects of special interest.

Cap. 6. The Poor Knights are to attend daily the high mass, mass of the Blessed Virgin, and Evensong and Compline (mattins, &c., not specified). At these services they are to occupy themselves in repeating seven score and ten salutations of Our Lady, viz., one Pater noster after every ten Aves. This sometimes is called 'three psalters of the Blessed Virgin.'

Cap. 21. De usu Sarum seruando. Item statuimus et ordinamus quod vsus et consuetudo psallendi et dicendi seu celebrandi diuinum officium, ministrandique in choro et altari, seu circa illud, celebrandique seu dicendi missas de die ac de beata Maria uirgine, necnon pro defunctis,<sup>1</sup> tam celebrando et legendo, quam cantando, stando et sedendo in choro et extra ipsum, qui in ecclesia Sarum seruentur, in capella obseruentur antedicta, secundum loci congruenciam et exigenciam personarum.

Caps. 22, 23. From Michaelmas to March mattins are to be begun at such a time as that they may be finished at day-break ('in ortu diei'). For the other half year they begin 'in aurora diei.' And all the choir services are to be sung 'cum nota' as in a cathedral church. Service is to begin immediately after the fourth peal, without any waiting, except for the Warden (provided that he has given notice that he may be expected).

<sup>1</sup> Cap. 26 prescribes that every day excepting the three Still 'penitential days,' on Christmas Day, Easter Day, and the five great Feasts of our Lady, the following masses were to be said daily cum nota (1) Mass of the Blessed Virgin, (2) Mass for the Dead (by a Vicar) before high mass, and (3) the Mass Salus populi 'pro statu salubri Domini Regis' likewise before the high mass.

Cap. 24. All the gremials who have been at mattins are to go daily straight into the Chapter-house after Prime, before Preciosa is said, and there to complete 'the service of the hour of Prime' according to the custom in the church of Salisbury. After which the Canons are to be left alone to transact business and corrections.

Cap. 28. Deacon and Subdeacon are to minister in tunicle and dalmatic when the choir is ruled, and on ordinary days ('profestis et ferialibus') to wear such vestments as are worn at Sarum.

Cap. 29. The priest on Sunday is to 'use' the Host which has been hanging above the high altar. A lamp is to burn, at least by night, in the chapel. (De cereis.) On week days one candle is to be lighted during mattins, evensong, and other hours. At ferial masses, two. On Sundays, and other feasts of nine lessons not being doubles, there are to be two at mattins, &c., as well as at mass. On minor-doubles, four. On principal and major-doubles, six; or, if the chapel can afford it, more.

Cap. 30. De habitibus singulorum. From Easter Eve to Michaelmas inclusive Canons wear clean white surplices with a grey almuces furred with miniver; the Vicars clean white surplices with black cloth almuces furred with black fur or lined with double sendal. Other clerks likewise wear black cloth almuces. The boy choristers wear clean white surplices. In the winter half they all put over them black copes, 'ecclesiarum cathedralium more.'<sup>1</sup>

Cap. 34. (The King and the Bp. of Winton are always to be commemorated.) De speciali collecta pro Rege. In singulisque missis maioribus dicte capelle specialis collecta pro dicti domini Regis qui est et erit statu, dicatur; illis diebus quibus una

"Item. Whereas, upon earnest request made unto us in other Cathedrall Churches within our progresse, wee have put downe the wairing of blacke Copcs and Scapulers, and Amysses of cloath, because it is thought to be a kinde of Monckery; And now intending to set an uniforme Order throughout all our Circuit; Wee require you, and yett neverthesse straightly charge you by the Kings Majesties authority unto us committed, that all Prebendaries and other Ministers of this Church doe surcease from using or wairing any blacke cope or Scapuler of Cloath above their surplises." For this extract we are indebted to Canon Dalton. The four choristers of Lincoln Cathedral still wear black gowns with white borders, a development from the cappa nigra de choro. The other boys (who wear surplices in choir) belong to the Burghersh Chantry foundation.

sola collecta secundum vsum Sarum ecclesie dicetur dumtaxat exceptis.' (Cf. Defensorium Directorii, cap. 6, p. 7, where, however, the point in question is the order of Collects for the Departed).<sup>1</sup>

Cap. 35. De fonte baptismali. Ordinamus insuper quod in dicta capella fons Baptismalis existat, compositus ornatu decenti, in quo Regum et magnatum aliorum liberi, si ad hoc ipsorum accedat deuocio, ualeant baptizari. (Cf. the question raised, with regard to monasteries, in Crede Michi § 22, pp. 34, 35.)

Cap. 36. De cimiterio et sepultura. Ordinamus itaque quod locum pro cimiterio ipsius capelle uoluntate regia deputatum in quo statuimus et ordinamus vt, post consecracionem eiusdem, corpora ibidem eligencium sepulturam licite sepeliri ualeant, idem Custos et Collegium consecrari procurent, celerius quo poterunt bono modo.

Cap. 37. Prefectio Precentoris. Item ordinamus quod de Canonicis dicte capelle vnus in Precentorem preficiatur per custodem et Canonicos presentes vel maiorem partem eorumdem.

¶ Officium Precentoris.

Ad Precentoris autem predicti officium pertinebit psallentes in dicta capella, et in ea interessentes diuinis, in cantu et psalmodia regulare, ac, quis eorum quam Antiphonam incipiet, per se uel per alium premunire, quod nulli premunito liceat refutare.

Ordinabit eciam de cantoribus qui Psalmos incipiant ex vtraque parte chori.

Habebit insuper in Tabula vel cartallo scribere ac in choro ponere quolibet die Sabbati declarando, per suam patentem scripturam huius, qui in septimana sequenti missas celebrabunt, lecciones legent, epistolas et euangelia ac responsoria, et canenda alia, decantabunt.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> A curious specimen of the Exeter Cathedral tabulae hebdomadales, cir. A.D. 1500, has been printed by Mr. H. W. Reynolds in his specimen of Exeter Chapter Records, folio 1891, pp. 73-75. The following extract for a single day in Easter week will sufficiently express the character of the whole. I expand the contractions.

IV. Bodl. Rawl. c. 288 (see xv.), contains (fo. 99) some portion of a Pie of two commemorations.

Beginning with—

Historia In principio (Sapientiae) cf. Brev. Sarum I. p. mccxli.)

Peto, Domine (Thobiae),

<sup>1</sup>—<sup>1</sup> Notandum quod in simili materia Breviarium Sarum (ed. Cantab. fasc. i. p. ccclxxviii.) loquitur de septem partibus cuiuslibet litterae kalendariae, de responsoriis dicendis (non ‘cantandis’), de Memoriis insuper solenniter uel sub silentio celebrandis, uel omittendis (de tribus commemorationibus faciendis) et de Missis in capitulo celebrandis.

Adonay (Judith),
Adaperiat (Machabaeorum), and Vidi Dominum (Ezechiel), and ends with part of the Advent history—

Aspiciens (Esaiae).

This MS. appears to have been never completely written; blanks precede and succeed it, and it does not occupy the whole of its leaves. The rubrication has not been introduced.

The following MS. is in London at the British Museum, and from it we have derived the collations marked 'Ga' in our notes to the fragments of Caxton's Ordinale 1477 (pp. 100-116), and likewise those marked 'R.' in our notes on a portion of Crede Michi (pp. 40-80).

V. London Brit. Mus. MS. Add. 25,456 (chartaceus fo. 104, cir. 1450-60.)

fo. 3<sup>b</sup>. Nomen heri cuiusdam autographum, "Tho: Wroth, Inner Temple, Dec. 22: 1679."

fo. 4-9<sup>b</sup>. Kalendarium partim atramento, partim litteris rubris conscriptum.

fo. 10. Ihs.—Summa indulgencie.

VI. In bibliotheca Ecclesiae Cathedralis Sarum, cod. MS. 152.

A large page containing the Pie for Advent, on vellum, has been preserved as a piece of binder's waste at the beginning of the fine Arlingham (Gloucestershire) Breviarium cum nota, secundum usum Sarum, Anno Domini circiter 1460<sup>o</sup> exaratum.

 written in black ink, with capitals in red and blue alternately, and begins thus :

"Littera dominicalis A. iiij. Nonas decembris tota cantetur historia.

Feria ij. V. de primo nocturno, cum R̃yo. 'Aspiciebam' et duobus ferialibus, viz. 'Obsecro,' Domine, et R̃yo. 'Alicui' cum missa 'Salus populi.'

In feria .iiij. et Sabbato fiant commemoraciones.

Feria iiij. de sancto Nicholao.

Feria v. de Oct. sancti Andree cum V. 'In omnem terram,' cum duobus primis R̃yjs, et vltimo viz. 'Vir iste.' et cum missa de Octa. sancti Andree.

Tamen quando R̃. de primo nocturno dominicali vj feria ante Adventum Domini," &c., &c.

We must leave a fuller account of this and the MSS. mentioned

Page 7, lines 5, 6. ‘Collectam pro regibus et reginis.’ In addition to what has been said above on Prayers for the Sovereign, at pp. 228–30, 234–5 text and notes, it may be observed that by an antient canon of a Council in Scotland, A.D. 1225, cap. 70, the second of five prayers at mass on ordinary days was said for the King, Queen, Royal Family, and People. Wilkins’ Concil. i. 617, iii. 42 foll. In time of war prayers were offered pro Rege, temp. Edw. I. Ibid. ii. 197. So also for Charles the Great in 781. A. A. Pelliccia, De Christianae Eccl. Prece pro Principibus (Neapoli, 1778) p. 338. See also the Benedictine custom in Concordia Regularis, p. 162, above, and cf. Addresses on the Holy Communion, by the Rt. Rev. John Wordsworth, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury, ed. 2, 1892, pp. 102–9, 255.

This, which Maydeston pronounces to be the right Sarum reading in the hymn Estimavit ortolanum, is found in the Sarum portiforia of 1519, 1557, &c., and in the St. John’s Coll. Cambridge, MS. ‘nisi’ is printed by Chevallon in 1531. (Brev. Sarum iii. p. 515n.)

Page 27, add note for line 13:—‘aliam Lucem tuam, qui’ appears to be a mistake in the original editions for ‘añam Lucem tuam, que’ (Caxton, in fact, has ‘alium . . . que’):—‘Lucem tuam’ being the Trinity antiphon at Compline. Brev. Sar. ii. p. 237.

ADDENDA.

Page 133, in foot-note 1, line 4, read iij. kal. Oct. (29 Sept.) It was, probably, on Michaelmas Day itself that Abp. Boniface dedicated the high altar, &c., at Salisbury in 1258. (Flores Historiarum, iii., 249.) But as the annual Dedication Festival, Sept. 30th, the morrow of that important holy day was considered preferable. This involved, however, the transference of St. Jerome's day.

Appendix III., p. 158. A series of Ferial Commemorations assigned to the parecclesia, or detached side-chapels in the Eastern Church, is noted by Goar, p. 16.
